The New York Bulletin enumerates the changes that have occurred in the business world and the conditions existing for the trade operations and prospects of the next season,

First. The currency question is a good as settled. The only changes that will be made in the currency laws are first, a suspension of the process of re tiring greenbacks pari passu with new issues of bank notes; and, next, a more explicit recognition than the resumption act conveys that United States notes, when redeemed after January 1, 1879, shall be subject to reissue in the ordinary course of the payments of the government. The effect of this legislation will be to render impossible any further contraction of the volume of legal tender notes under the resumption act, to keep the outstanding amount of those notes stationary, and to confine future expansion on contractions of the paper circulation to the issues of the national banks. Both the government and bank issues will be maintained steadily on a par with coin after resumption, the treasury notes through ing hands-off as to Merrimon? Third. Improvement of the national credit, shown by the reflux of securities from Europe, which had amounted to $150,000,000 annually, having completely stopped, and a disposition manifested abroad to re-invest in the United States. Increase in government credit produces confidence in all organizations, State, civic, coporate and private.

The Raleigh Observer, of the 18th, has long editorial article condemnatory of Capt W M Cocke, Jr., of Asheville, for having announced himself an inde-pendent. Democratic candidate for udge of the ninth judicial district against Mr J C L Gudger, the regular nominee. In the course of its article our Raleigh namesake truthfully says In the independent candidacy is a rose that never fails to have many and pects to be elected, and that, too, in the main, by the votes of the party to which he has hitherto been hostile. The process is a simple one; divide your own party and get the vote of the enemy solid and the thing is done.

This being an acknowledged fact it must be seen that independentism is subversive of party organization, and if it is so in one case it is so in another. If it is true (and it is) that a man who refuses to abide the decision of a Demderatic jufficial convention is a disorganizer, is it not equally true that the man who refuses to abide the decision of a Democratic senatorial caucus is advance to stand by a caucus nomination, is he not consurable equally with the man who refuses, after it is made, to stand by a convention's nomination? Clearly the two are in the same boat, except that a better showing can be made for the latter than for the former, and for this reason : that the one waits until after the nomination is made before he cries fraud, while the other cries fraud six months, yea, six vears before it is made, and before the constituent elements of the body which makes it have even been named.
