The Long-Desired Colic-Proof Cucumber Invented

by a Man in Hackensack.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

Edison has given to the world several valuable inventions, but he will do well to make the most of his fame, because there is a man in Hackensack,

N J, who will doubtless soon outshine him as a benefactor to his race. This philanthropist long ago decided that mankind needed nothing so much as a colic-proof cucumber. He had for years appreciated the delicate taste of that watery vegetable, and had the fullest realization of its cooling effect when served, acidulated and iced, with the morning meal. But his pleasure was always destroyed by a knowledge that the feast would be followed by that abdominal torture which the cucumber is so well fitted to produce.

He, therefore, concentrated his mental powers on the production of a cucumber which would satisfy the palate beings. He, therefore, chose some perfect seeds and wrapped each seed in a small piece of warm flannel soaked with camphor. In the soil where the seeds were desposited he put a lay-er of ground mustard and sprinkling vomica and arnica in pellets. By this means he proposes to cure the cucum-bers of the colic which they contain instead of waiting to apply the remedies to suffering man after the vege-table has done its work. It is too early for Hackensack cucumbers yet, but when the new species is ready for market and is proved a success there can be no doubt of the demand for The Bankrupt Act.

[Greensboro New North State.]

The repeal of the bankrupt act will go into effect the 1st of September, Having conformed to all the requirements of the act the bankrupt is entitled to his discharge:

1. If the assets which come into the hands of the assignee are equal to 30 cents on the dollar of the debts proved, which the bankrupt owes as principal contracted since the first of January,

2. Or, if one-fourth in number and one-third in value of those who prove debts due from the bankrupt as principal, contracted since January 1, 1869, consent, the bankrupt may be discharged.

It will thus be seen that in any event a debtor without assets is entitled to a discharge from all debts which he owes as principal, contracted before January 1, 1869, and from all security debts whensoever contracted.

One of the College Addresses. One of the most interesting and pracical addresss that has been lately reported in any of the college commencements is that of Col John T L Preston, of the Virginia Military Institute, delivered before the alumni of Washington and Lee University, in Lexington, Virginia. It may be neces-sary to explain that both these prominent Virginia institutions are in the same town, and that there has been a generous emulation, though not an invidous rivalry, between them for many years. Col Preston has been connected with the Virginia Military Insti-tute since its establishment forty years ago, being second in command to its presiding officer, and it was probably in great measure to his influence that the institute was originally established. He gave a most interesting history of the college for the last half century. We have been struck with the great frankness of his criticism of men and things, both in connection with the college and the material interests of Virginia. He spoke of Gen Blackburn, who "was called the natural Virginia orator of his day," and said that "nothing is more unreliable than a natural orator 1878. This gives about two months except an unnatural one." He said for debtors to take the benefit of the
