CAPITAL-LABOR.

Where to Invest Both-A New Op ning,

[Hoosac Valley (Mass) News 22d.] There is a great deal of capital in the North unemployed or unprofitably in-vested. There are numberless families all through the Eastern States with a saving of from $500 to $2,000, which feel that they are not standing on vantage ground—have not found their opportunity. To the farmer with moderate savings and to the manufacturer with money idle or poorly invested, an advantageous investment comes as a

It is the object of these papers, three in number, to present the offers of easy and certain returns to all who will invest in the opportunities so manifestly open. The West is filling up, the choicest pickings have been plucked, and the fever, which raged like the contagion, is dyingout. Sectional differences and antagonisms, creating uncertainties and distrusts, have alone prevented the unveiling of Southern rches to Northern eyes.

Gen Steward L Woodford, in his late address at Amherst college, in terse and eloquent sentences pointed to the "new South." But in these articles we only look at the South as a paying investment. It is time that the council mies of the South are considered and not alone its politics. There are farms and factories and incomes and homes at the South waiting the Aladdin slamp of Northern enterprise. The New York Tribune has lately published a long article entitled "Homes in the South" and Gen Siegel in a notable address has emphasized the fallow claim and opening of the great country south of prices.
"Mason and Dixon's line."

We shall attempt no imaginative picture which shall delude and disappoint. The writer of these articles aims simply to chronicle the results of personal observation, the observation of a man with intense Northern sympathies a Radical in fact who has people or climate. The Northern mind should, at the noutset, be dis-There is a wonderous diversity at the Livery Stable.

are as healthy as any portion of New England. The landscapes are agreeable to a New Englander's eye, and there is an earnest desire, among the prominent and leading property holders and business men, that northern capitalists and enterprising farmers shall come in and possess the land with them. I am aurumised at the strength and character surprised at the strength and character of this feeling. Col Wm Johnston, one of this feeling. Col win Johnston, one of the most prominent men in western North Carolina, an ardent rebel, an intimate friend of Jefferson Davis and who is laboring hard to develop the resources of the South, said to me:

"If I could see one third or one half northern alternate infrared into any northern element infused into our population I should be happy. I never would ask their politics nor care.'

I am not aware that any of these lands are in the hands of speculators. The actual owners hold them and legitimate brokers offer them for sale. The widest range of crops are cultivated and everything save the extreme tropical fruits is profitably raised.
