A Patient Waiter

The following story of an unpardonable practical joke on a trustful young woman is told by the Watertown Times : "A young man from this city visited a Garthage photograph gallery day before yesterday. The artist, whom he knew, was out, and while waiting for his return a girl from Champion came in to get her picture taken. The young man told the customer to be seated. The young man pointed the camera at her and then slid down stairs. One hour and fifteen minutes afterward he returned, and to his astonishment there sat the girl just as speaks so plainly of our unprecedented tonishment there sat the girl just as calamity? Where it all will end God he had left her. Supposing was all regular, she enquired how much longer she would be obliged to look pretty ?'
