FATAL WORK IN MEMPHIS. Scenes at the Commissary Department-Feeding

the Hungry-Heart-Rending Scenes.

[Memphis Avalanche: |

The King of Terrors continues to snatch victims with fearful rapidity. One by one those who remain in the city and are liable to the monster malady are taken down, and the question is asked by those yet on their feet, 'Who will be the next to fall?" But three short weeks ago our city was active with business of all classes, our people were happy and prosperous, and the entire business community was in cheerful temper over the prospect of a heavy and lucrative fall trade. Now our streets are deserted, our stores and residences empty, and out of a population of more than 50,000 barely 5,000 remain, and of these nearly 500 are in the grave, and perhaps double that number lie suffering with racking ble prices are our motto. pains and burning fevers. But three weeks have passed since the fever broke out, and from six to eight weeks must yet elapse before relief can be extended and the fever checked by the appearance of frost. The scenes about the commissary department awaken in the writer's memory the days fol-lowing the capture of the city of Savannah, when the people of a starved town, many of the members of the line and draw the rations which the generous people of the cities of the North had sent in great ship loads to the suffering Southern port. Here the crowd is made up of negroes, who sit on the curbing, sit on the payement of the curbing and representations and restricted a nandsome line of famples of famples and improved city lot, house with nine rooms, and modern conveniences, fine well and inspect the same, and please leave their orders. ledge. The crowd is four or five hundred in number during the livelong day. The system of giving rations, as worked by the relief committee, is as cautious, as proof against imposition, probably, as it is possible to make it.

All applications of the needy are made to ward committeemen, whose duty it is to look into the justice of the claims made to them, and then give a draft on Commissary Maccabe for the number of rations and the number of days. This draft is presented and the holder's name and time for drawing and number of rations are entered in a large in- greater than 5,000 according to the last cendexed book. From this book they are for. Over 30,000 rations have been issued so far, and the demand is increasing daily in proportion to the rapidly growing want and utter destitution among the colored people. The books of the commissary are admirably kept, showing every ounce of food received through any source, and showing clearly its disposition.

Letter of Acceptance From General Joseph E. Johnston.

[Special Dispatch to the Baltimore Sun.] RICHMOND, VA., Sept. 5 .- General Joseph E. Johnston, the nominee of the Conservative convention for Congress from this district, has just written the following letter:

"To the Voters of the Third Congressional District: I announced to the nominating convention of the district, immediately before its adjournment, that, in a letter of acceptance I expect-ed to be called upon to write, my opinions on the questions now interesting the public should be freely given. I have not been called upon for such a letter, but have received from various parts of the district very earnest expressions of wishes to learn my opinions on these questions, especially that of finance. "I hold that far the first of them in importance is that of the maintenance of the Democratic party of the United States in its integrity. For we of the South owe to that party our release from the condition of conquered provinces and the protection of the constitution we now enjoy. And if we main-tain it undivided it will probably active and executive branches of the government, and introduce honesty, economy, and strict construction of the constitution into the government, and

"Being a life-long Democrat, I stand upon the Democratic platform in this and all other political questions, namely: strict construction of the constitution, close economy in all branches of the government, and the extinction of the national debt gradually, but as soon as possible. I have always been hostile favor of one section of the countrythat a small one-to the injury of all others. I am opposed, also, and very strongly, to all taxes bearing unequally upon the different sections of the country, like that on tobacco, which extorts from Virginia a much larger contribu-tion to the United States revenue than is paid by the six New England States, The Seventh District Matter-Reply to T.
