Miss Edith Becomes Neighborly.

BY BERT MARTIN.

Oh, you're the girl lives on the corner? Come in, if you want to—come quick!

What's your name? Mary Ellen? How funny! Mine's Edith—it's nice, you see.

Come in. It's quite dark in the parlor, and sister will keep the blinds down.

Richard, Vt., has had frost every month except July.

There is a man in Washington the most powerful man in the country.

There is a man living in Cook county, Texas, who boasts of a set of furniture made from a tree in which his father was hung ten years ago.

What's the man selling at?" asked an Illinois farmer of a boy named "Wid,"

"One is glass in eyes and the other is stings." That is the answer—and a very clever one it is, too.

O'Leary, who won the recent walking match, is a thoroughbred. He is said to be a son of the Mrs. O'Leary whose cow kicked Chicago into a blaze.

An exchange asks, "What shall we do with the rest of the year?"

"Keep a stiff upper lip, don't spit tobacco on your white neck, and never get high on two pairs," was a Chicago man's advice to his son who was going out in the world to carve a name and fame for himself.

At the Minnesota fair there was a bull on exhibition that the President particularly admired, and when he looked at the tag around the bull's neck he found for a momentary moment that the name was "Old Fraud."

Dr. Felton, the Independent candidate for Congress in the seventh Georgia district, is ably assisted in his electioneering by his wife, who acts as his husband's secretary and press correspondent and defender.

Clara Louise Kellogg, received a diamond anonymously the other day, Mrs. Kellogg, Sr., desires to inform the public, which she immediately converted into a money contribution for the yellow fever sufferers.

It is not safe to argue that a revival of business is at hand just because your wife has succeeded in disposing of your second-best set of clothes.

Senator Oglesby, of Illinois, is swinging a very bloody shirt in his campaign for re-election. In a speech at Bloomington last week he prophesied that the "sold Southern" would be the undoing of the government and cried aloud: "Oh, my God! oh, my country! my never see that day!"

It may be very well for editors who have just safely passed through the terrible storm of the county fair premium list to mock at the calamities of the men who are just preparing to walk among hope and the patchwork of the future.

Brief News Items.

The people of Paris, who have already done so much for the yellow fever sufferers, are preparing to do more.

Communications have passed between Minister Foster and the Mexican government, in which it was mutually agreed that the recent insuring demonstration at the National Theatre, in the city of Mexico, during the reference of a speaker to the United States, was unpremeditated, was generally disapproved, and was of no importance.

Near Livingston, Tenn., a few days ago, a party of revenue officers, who were on duty raiding illicit distilleries, encountered a gang of moonshiners, armed with long-range rifles. A fight ensued and continued until the ammunition exhausted, compelling them to retreat.

It was reported that four distillers were killed and several wounded.

United States Minister Noves telegraphs the Department of State that the French exhibition has been eminently successful, and in many respects the greatest that has ever been held.

He further says that he was just ready to feel proud of the American exhibit, although it was not as large as it might have been had the invitation of the French government been sooner accepted and the congressional appropriation been more liberal.

As it is, the United States will bear off more prizes, according to the number of exhibitors, than any other country. They will take seven or eight grand prizes and a large number of gold, silver and bronze medals.

A WIDING, QUIET AND SIMPLE. The Marriage of an Austrian Baron's Son to a Young Lady of Brooklyn.

(Special Dispatch to the Philadelphia Times.) New York, October 7.—Fashionable residents of Brooklyn are aglow over the exceedingly quiet and simple wedding of Helen M. Thurber, daughter of Charles Thurber, who made a fortune in the war, to Charles Victor Von Schourer, of Wirdeck, Austria.

The groom is very accomplished, speaking six languages with facility, among them English. Mr. Thurber and his daughter met him while they were living in Brooklyn, where they were instantly attracted to each other and an engagement to marry soon followed.

The wedding was purposely delayed until the return was made to America, as Miss Thurber wished to be married in Brooklyn, where her relatives live, although she had no home here, having lived in European cities. The groom arrived on Friday and the marriage was on Saturday evening. Directly after the ceremony the groom slipped upon her finger an ancient signet ring bearing the arms of his noble family. The pair then started on a wedding trip to Washington and other cities. They are to return to Europe this month and will live in Paris until the groom inherits his father's estate, title and privileges. His father is seventy-seven years old.

ONE ROMEO AND SIX JULIETS.

Rignold's Troubles in Keeping the Family Together.

[New York Correspondence Boston Herald.] George Rignold found himself in a condition not uncommon to actors—out of money. He was popular, however, the long run of "Henry V." in Booth's Theatre having familiarized the people with him as a handsome, dashing, conquering monarch.

He decided to fill his pockets by means of the benefit performance which was given at Romeo and six actresses as Juliet. He has given his services on many such occasions, and therefore, was able to depend on a reciprocity that would provide him with the attraction of free of cost.

Adelaide Neilson, Fannie Davenport and Ada Dyas had been helped by him in that way, and could not well say no to his invitation. Maud Granger was then a beginner in fame, and readily volunteered.

So did Minnie Cummings, a novice made a sixth Juliet, paying well, it was said, for the privilege. An entire act or scene was allotted to each—the balcony to Miss Neilson, the masked ball to Miss Davenport, the nurse's interview to Miss Dyas, the farewell to Miss Granger, the potion to Miss Cummings, and the tomb to the novice. All this was easily planned. The first trouble was when the Julietes assembled in the greenroom. There were only five.

Miss Neilson sent a note to say that she was too sick to act. The real reason was said to be that she, a star of more or less magnitude, was unwilling to put up with Booth's mistakes, neither did she stock actresses. The second trouble came of Miss Davenport refusing to be introduced to Miss Granger, on the ground of the latter's antecedents. Perhaps the fact that Miss Granger was by far the most beautiful of the Julietes probably had something to do with Fanny's disdain.

The third trouble was the antipathy between Miss Davenport and Miss Dyas, growing out of their experience in the management of the Julietes Theatre company. In those days Miss Dyas was a leading actress, and Miss Davenport was the subtitle. Miss Davenport aspired to "leading business" and crowded Miss Dyas. Miss Dyas was credited with remarks about Miss Davenport and Manager Daly. Miss Davenport was credited with remarks about Miss Dyas and ex-Mayor Oakey Hall.

Therefore, when they met in the greenroom of Booth's theatre, neither side offered any sign of seeing the other. The fourth trouble was with Miss Cummings, who resented a slight and walked deliberately out of the stage door.

It is now that one of the Julietes had escaped reached Rignold. He sent a messenger after her, and she was overtaken two blocks away, mollified by explanations, and brought back. The fifth trouble was caused by Miss Davenport remarking that she didn't understand why a novice was brought into the combination. The novice, already scared, was so disturbed by the reflection that she made a burlesque of her part.

To designate this natural medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a SINGLENESS OF PURPOSE, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of women. It will disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PROPRIETOR'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVICE, a book of over 100 pages, sent post-paid, on receipt of $1.50.
