THE NEWFOUNDLAND TOG.

A New Cross, of Which Gre deatly Expected.

St. John's, Oct. 28.—The extinction which has latterly threatened the pure breed of Newfoundland dogs has been fortunately arrested by the importation of several splendid specimens of the Leonberg breed, which is the result of skillful crossing between the St. Bernard, the Newfoundland, and the wolf dog of the Pyrenees. The dogs were recently brought here in charge of the famous conchologist, Herr I. A. Verkruzen. This is notable news for the outside world, because everybody has a feeling for the sagacious, brave, and handsome brute that bears the name of this island, though few persons would be inclined to credit the fact that there are not half a dozen dogs in the whole United States of absolutely pure Newfoundland breed. More markedly than in any other camine species, this dog perpetuates all the traits of his breed, even to the progeny of animals that are very distantly removed from his species through miscegenation. Hence the mistake that many labor under who believe they possess Newfoundland dogs of a pure breed, while their big pets are only such in tenaciously preserving a strong resem-blance to their grand-sires. The average height of the true Newfoundland dog is thirty inches. He is entirely black, his claws are webbed to the points, his paws are massive, his gait majestic, and his countenance striking-ly benevolent and deeply trustful. But the renowned qualities of this famous dog are to be superceded by the splendid breed known as the Leonberg. The specimens now here are soon to propagate, but they will not be full grown till their third year. Baron Essig of Leonberg, Wurtemberg, Germany, was the gentleman who undertook the production of the new species, and the specimens brought here were carefully selected from his kennels. Good specimens sell for $250, and superior dogs command as high a price as $500. At all the great dog shows of Baden, Lima, Vienna, Paris, and London they received the highest premiums. They attain the height of thirty-six inches, and are frequently over 100 pounds in weight. Their heads are large, erect, and hand-somely shaped, and their bodies are strikingly noble in their symmetry. They inherit with large interest all the gentleness of the Newfoundland, their intelligence surpasses that of any other species of dog, and they are capable of do chickens have no future existence? being trained to do almost anything Because they have their necks twirled within the possibilities of dog-kind. Jobbins will be a rare sight to behold four of laughed with the rest of us when he these handsome brutes, this winter, brilliantly caparisoned, and perfectly tractable, hitched to a commodious dog sleigh, and flying over the frozen roads in the environs of St. John's, or over

Among the desperate devices resorted to by the Chicago faro-bank proprie-tors to evade the vigorous raids of the police, a favorite one is to lock up the inmates in fire proof vaults, which are supplied with ventillating holes for this purpose. Sunday morning at 1 c'clock George Hankins' place was raid-Noticing the ventilating holes, they put paper into them and again sat down In about an hour the air in the vault had become so vitiated that the prisonmen in an air-tight vault only eleven feet square was a dangerous experiment which faro-bank patrons will hardly consent to try again, and its disastrous result will be of value in aiding the police in their efforts to suppress gambling in Chicago, A STRUGGLE WITH A BEAR.

Charles Norton's Little Controversy on the Boise River, and What Came of It. [From the Boise City (Idaho) Statesman.]

Charles Norton, who has been engaged in mining on the Boise river, near the junction of the north and middle branches of the river, had a very serious encounter with a bear last Saturday morning. He had gone to the top of a steep hill, and when near the sum-mit had taken hold of a small tree to pull himself up so as to reconnoiter the valley beyond, where he had been accustomed to find deer, when a large shebear that was lying with her two cubs just on the other side of the bush, which concealed them, sprang upon him, seizing him by the under jaw and tearing the lower lip down, making an ugly wound. The front of the upper jaw was also fractured just above the teeth, six of which were loosened and hung down with the detached portion of the jaw. Another fierce bite of the enraged animal lacerated the cheek and tore the scalp in several places. The right arm was also bitten through. In the scuffle Norton and the bear both lost their equilibrium near the top of the hill, and together rolled down the steep hillside a distance of forty feet. Upon reaching the botton they were about six feet apart, when Norton's dog was heard barking at the top of the hill where the cubs had been left. This attracted the attention of the bear, when Norton, who had had his gun strapped to him all the time, managed to get the muzzle against the rear portion of the brute, and reaching back cocked the piece and fired it. The ball passed lengthwise through the then made his way home.

The eleventh anniversary of the Methodist Freedmen's Aid Society, in St. Paul's church, New York, Monday evening, attracted an audience that about half filled the church. A few freedmen were in attendance. The New Orleans Jubilee Band sang old fashioned slave and religious songs. After prayer, Bishop J. W. Wiley, of Cincinnati, read the annual report of the board of management. In the past year $63,402.85 have been collected and disbursed; 70 teachers have been sustained in the field; 2,940 pupils have been taught; a school has been built in Greensboro, North Carolina, for $10.-000, the gift of Geo. Bennett, of Troy N. Y., and another school established in La Grange, Georgia, half of the mon-ey employed in its building having been contributed by Southern colored perpersons; the standard of scholarship has been elevated, and a quarter of a million of dollars in school property added to the resources of the society. The Bishop admitted that progress in educating the colored people is on the whole slow; he pleaded that it should remembered that the society was organized only twelve years ago, and that it would be strange if the race should come from such a tutelage as slavery without even a trace of deception, dishonesty or of licentiousness. Emancipation did not relieve the race from the wrongs inflicted on it in its bondage. Yet, the report concluded, to those who know how degraded the race has been, it is plain what good has been done by the society, and that good done has been in building from the foundation the moral Starving on Broadway.

A woman about twenty-four years of age, dressed in deep mourning, was found in a fainting condition on Broad-way, New York, Monday afternoon. Mr. Powers, proprietor of the Grand Central Hotel, had her conveyed into one of the parlors of the hotel, where restoratives were applied. The woman gave her name as Ella Willingford, and her residence at No. 5 Delancey street. She said she had not eaten anything in three days. Her husband went to New Orleans about a month ago, where he was employed as groom, and he was about sending for his wife when he was taken sick with the yellow fever and died. The news of his death prostrated the poor woman, and an additional burden was placed upon her shoulders by the birth of a child. She had not entirely recovered from her illness when the pangs of hunger drove her into the street in search of food. Her two children, a boy two years of age, and the baby, were in the meantime left in a cold and cheerless room. When the woman had told her pitiable story, Mr. Powers headed a subscription list for her, and several of the guests also gave her money. Before she could realize her sudden good fortune, a bountiful repast was laid before her, and thus provided for she almost bounded from the presence of her benefactors to hurry to the relief of her famishing child-

Of course you've all heard that not over demoralizing conundrum, the completeness of which is as to thus: "Why heard it, and thought the humor of it wouldn't ooze out if he stowed it away in his practical head. The chance came for him to shoot it off, and he did so. "Why," said Jobbins to an audience of expectant friends, "why do chickens have no future existence? Give it up? Of course you do. Because"—and he laughed and chuckled so to himself that the crowd was just aching for the wherefore - "because - a-hem! because their necks are twirled in this!" And why not a soul of the party took stock A GENTS WANTED Too the desired to this day in his merriment.

THEIR WEDDING JOURNEY.

Modern Fashionable Custom-To a Hotel Instead

[New York Sun.]

The practice of newly wedded couples going to a hotel immediately after the marriage ceremony has become so common as to almost almost superce-ded the old-time wedding tour. Nowadays a public marriage in upper New York is not considered complete until the couple have been driven to the nearest fashionable hotel, and have passed at least a week within its walls. This is especially true of what are known as evening weddings—those held in some notable churches, and followed by a crowded reception in the bride's home. After the last congratulations have been exchanged, the bride and bridegroom thread their way through the throng of black-attired men and befounced and bejeweled ladies under the arched way, which the thoughtful master of ceremonies has provided, until they reach their coach. In banging the door the head usher takes care to usher in a stage whisper, Drive to the Pennsylvania depot," or the "Grand Central," as the case may be, and the throng return, imagining that the honeymoon is to be spent in Philadelphia or Boston. The carriage has gone hardly a block before down goes the window, and the driver reins in his horses as he hears:

"Where did they tell you to go?" "To the Pennsylvania depot, sorr." "Pennsylvania depot! Pshaw! Drive to the Buckingham.

And to the Buckingham they are whirled accordingly. For years this clever little deception has been pracbody of the animal and through the head, killing her instantly. Of late, however, the practice has become so popular and so widely known that the affectation of a wedding tour is only kept up for the sake of appearances. "Philadelphia" and "Boston," in the vocabulary of Hymen, have come to mean "Windsor" and "Buckingham."

The Tennessee crop for the year ending September 30, 1878, was 305,000 bushels against 500,000 for the year previous: in Virginia the crop was 405,000 against 780,000 last year, and in North Carolina it was only 85,000 against 125,000 in '77. The growing crop—i. e., for 1878-'79—is see, 800,000 for Virginia, and 90,000 for North Carolina. The North Carolina crop promises to be about the same as to quality as last year. A new feature with this crop is the largely increased amount shelled, one estimate being that one-fifth of the crop was taken in this way. The North Carolina crop finds its way into other markets through this port, there now being three differ-ent firms in Wilmington engaged in buying, selling and shipping them. Bankrupteles File'.

The number of bankruptcies filed in the United States under the recent bankrupt law from the time into operation, June, 1st, 1867, to August 31st, 1878, according to the statistics published by the Boston Commercial Bulletin, was 103,055, of which 15,151 were in the Eastern States, 24,534 in the Middle States, 22,780 in the Southern States, 40,097 in the Western States and 433 in the District of Columbia. These figures, large as they may appear, dwindle into comparative insignificance when it is and intellectual education of the freedstated that the bankruptcies number only one to every seventh man engaged in business for the period of eleven years and three months, or for a single year only one bankrupt out of every one hundred and one.

A Lady Killed by Hair Dyc.

[Cincinnati Gazette.] A few days since a middle-aged lady, living in the suburbs of Springfield, Ohio, died from some mysterious disease located in the head. The symptoms had long been manifested, but no treatment seemed to have permanent effect. After death there was an examination made, in which Cincinnati physicians took part, and which resulted in the unanimous decision that death was caused, primarily, by the use, for a long period, of chemical compounds for dyeing the hair. There is said to have been a coating formed over the brain, causing something like paralysis of that
