

RAILROAD DIRECTORY.

Table listing train routes and schedules for various lines including Atlantic & Charlotte, Charlotte & Salisbury, and Charlotte & Wilmington.

CHARLOTTE POST OFFICE.

Table of office hours for the Charlotte Post Office, including Money Order, Registry, and various mail services.

INDICATIONS.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, Feb. 11, 7:30 P. M.

Followed by partly cloudy weather, southerly winds shifting to westerly and northerly and in the northern portions falling, followed by rising barometer and slight change in temperature.

Metereological Record.

Table showing weather data for various stations including Atlanta, Augusta, and Savannah.

Index to New Advertisements.

Never speak of gloomy weather after yesterday.

The officers of the law had little to do yesterday.

Remember the matinee this afternoon at 2:30. Mrs. Chanfrau will play Aurora Floyd.

Robin hunting is now conducted with some success by sportsmen, partridges being nearly all gone.

A bale of cotton which weighed only 24 pounds more than the last one was sold on this market a few days ago.

The Hornets' Nest Riflemen attracted much attention on their parade Monday afternoon; it was really refreshing to see them out once more.

Don't fail to see Mrs. Chanfrau this evening. It is the last time we will have an entertainment at the opera house probably for many weeks.

That was a big rabbit hunt about a half a dozen young men had a few days ago. They only had about six dogs, but five or six hours they slew five and thirty of the large-eyed innocents.

Next Saturday is the day, remember, for the Northern convention to meet at the several cities seats for the purpose of appointing delegates to attend the State conventions to be held on the 1st of March.

Members of Meeklenburg Lodge, Independent Order of Odd-Fellows, went to the country day before yesterday to bury Mr. A. W. Lawing, a brother Odd Fellow, who died the day before at the home, about ten miles west of the city.

The Longman property, consisting of four vacant lots on the Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio Railroad, Tryon street, was sold yesterday in front of the court house door by W. E. Hand, commissioner, for $2,140. This is considered a very fair price.

Death of a Prominent Citizen.

A. W. Lawing, Esq., a justice of the peace and one of the most prominent citizens of Paw Creek township, died at his home, Sunday afternoon, of pneumonia. He was buried at a private funeral ground, Monday afternoon, a number of the Odd Fellows of this city going out to assist in the ceremonies, he being a member of this fraternity. Mr. Lawing was a good citizen and a man well esteemed in his neighborhood.

A Murphy Temperance Society.

Miss Painter delivered a strong temperance address before a large crowd at Calvary Mission church last night, and afterwards a temperance society was organized on Monday afternoon, a number of the Odd Fellows of this city going out to assist in the ceremonies, he being a member of this fraternity. Mr. Lawing was a good citizen and a man well esteemed in his neighborhood.

A Charlotte Horse that Has Beaten Mollie McCarthy's Time.

A correspondent of the Turf, Field and Farm, probably the highest authority on sporting matters, writes to us: "Has Mollie McCarthy been beaten by other than Ten Brock? If so by what horse? To this the editor replies that she has by a host of others, Charles being the most prominent among them which has beaten her time at four miles, is Abd-el-Koree, now owned in this city. He hasn't been on the track for several years, but is still as lively as a cricket, and is one of the prettiest and most symmetrical animals in the country."

Miss Chanfrau at the Opera House Last Night.

If Mrs. Chanfrau had many warm admirers in Charlotte, and she certainly had, she must have doubled the number last night, although her audience, owing to the Cabarrus county miners, was not so large. Mr. Taylor's adaptation of "Marie, a Woman of the People," is full of powerful situations and touching appeals to our better natures, and these Mrs. Chanfrau brought out with a depth of feeling and naturalness which we have never seen surpassed in the opera house in Charlotte. When we have said this, there is little else to be said. We have no criticisms to make and apparently the audience had none. Each burst of indignation, each display of the depth of a mother's love, and the brave struggles against the misfortunes of poverty were vociferously applauded, and three times were called before the curtain. Tears, too, filled many eyes, and some of the audience wept outright.

The Governor of Louisiana Has Signed the Bill to Prevent Cruelty to Animals.

Under the law the "grand national dog fight" announced in New Orleans for the last week in February, will probably be prevented.

The Six Days' Walking Tournament at Bridgeport, Conn., in which there were six contestants, ended Saturday night in the success of Samuel Merritt, Campbell's trainer, who made 600 miles.

The Governor of Louisiana has signed the bill to prevent cruelty to animals. Under the law the "grand national dog fight" announced in New Orleans for the last week in February, will probably be prevented.

Machinery Hall, on the Centennial grounds, at Philadelphia, which originally cost $80,000, was sold at auction Saturday. There were only five bidders, and it was knocked down to W. C. Allison & Co., car builders, for $24,000.

The Atlanta (Ga.) board of trade puts its foot down firmly against the compromise by which business men sneak out of paying their debts.

Its members have signed an agreement to settle with no creditor for less than 100 cents on the dollar, unless a presidential cause make it utterly impossible for him to pay in full.

Citizens of Omaha, Neb., and vicinity have shipped a car load of flour to Glasgow, Scotland, for the relief of the unemployed and distressed in that city.

Free transportation was furnished to New York by the railroad companies, and from there to Glasgow by the Anchor Line Steamship Company.

The police raided Enoch's Variety Theatre, in Philadelphia, Saturday night capturing in all 165 persons, among them the proprietor and his wife, 41 females and 118 boys.

Enoch was a holder in $300 worth of counterfeit money, and selling liquor to minors, and the remainder of the prisoners were held in various smaller sums.

The first through train on the North Shore Railroad arrived at Quebec, Canada, from Montreal, Saturday night.

A great demonstration followed, in which Mr. Jolly, premier of Quebec, who was on the train, made a speech and was escorted home by a torchlight procession. The last spike, a silver one, was driven Saturday by Mrs. Jolly at Terrebonne, who sent it well home by blows with the hammer.

THE "RISING SUN."

So thought Constantine when he became a convert, because a "Pagan" refused to absolve him from the guilt of his crimes, and the "Christian" readily agreed, and specially manufactured for him a "sign" by which he was to "conquer."

"CONQUER BY THIS SIGN."

Henry the VIII in turn rejected Constantine's specialty and became the "defender of the new Faith" with his six wives, one only outliving him. Seven hundred years before Constantine lived Solomon, who built a Temple with out-houses, courts, &c., on 20 acres of ground, 700 wives, 900 ditto, a good sized population to the acre.

The Queen of Sheba admired his wisdom more than his magnificence, and significantly remarked that "the half of his greatness had not been told her"; but after he declared that "all is vanity," he died. Napoleon Bonaparte, on his narrow escape from the invading tide of the Red Sea, while passing through on the spot where Pharaoh and his horse perished, exclaimed: "If I had possessed here like Pharaoh, what a text I would have furnished Othello!"

A Source of Much Bodily Evil.

The habit of body becomes irritable, much evil is inflicted on the system. The stomach becomes dyspeptic, bilious symptoms develop themselves, the circulation in the bowels is deranged, the nerves in the general disorder. It is of the utmost importance that the bowels should be thoroughly and speedily regulated when they grow derelict. The corrective agent best adapted to this purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a wholesome, non-grating vegetable compound, which has been brought into general use. Recently Mr. Eugene Asbury, of this city, secured control of the patent with the right to make the traps and to sell State and county rights, and he is now engaged in the intricate and intricate invention to public notice. The trap is large and has three separate apartments. The rat walks into the large open space to eat the bait prepared for him, and his weight presses down the floor on which he stands. The only way open to him then is through a door. Jumping through this, it closes behind him, and at the same time the first floor, relieved of his weight, re-adjusts itself and is ready for fresh victims. In the second room, there is a trap, and the rat goes in to eat the bait. The door is closed, and the rat is in the first and second, closes behind him in like manner, and nothing is then left for the rat to do except to sit down and wait for death. The opening in the floor of the trap has been closed by the weight of the rat, so that the way in is ever open and the way out ever closed—reminding us of another place the way to which is paved, not exactly with bread and meat, but with the bait of the rat. The trap has been known to catch twenty-five rats in one night. One of our citizens bought one and caught eight rats the first night. It is a very ingenious contrivance and as a complete "take in" on the rat is an entire success.

Escape of Prisoners from the Statesville Jail—Chase and Re-capture.

Statesville had a big excitement Sunday morning. About 8:30 o'clock people in the jail heard a loud noise, and a cry of "Help! Unlock this door! Let me out!" Persons in the neighborhood rushed to the jail and found the jailer, Deputy Sheriff Joyner, confined in a cage with a couple of prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr. Cowles rode across the fields and intercepted the prisoners, the door being locked on the outside. He had gone up to give the prisoners their breakfasts. A white man named Dishman, a notorious criminal from the upper end of the county, now under indictment for horse stealing, requested him (the jailer) to let him out, and he did so, and no sooner had he entered the cell of Dishman's fellow prisoner than Dishman closed and locked the door behind him. The horse-thief, who had been in the jail for some time, followed by Messrs. W. A. Daniels and A. D. Cowles, both on horseback and armed, turned into the railroad cut just above town. Mr