INTERVIEWS WITH DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMEN.

The New York Herald recently published interviews with the Democratic members of Congress from the State of New York, as to the next Democratic presidential nominee, and has supplemented this with a publication, covering the views of all the Democratic members of the lower house of the forty-fifth Congress, the interviews occupying eight and a half columns of the Herald of Saturday last.

We copy in full what the Democratic Congressmen from North Carolina have to say on the subject: Mr. Jesse Y. Yeates, of the first district of North Carolina, said that Thurman is a wise, good, honest and faithful patriot and a suitable man for the standard bearer of the Democracy.

Mr. Alfred M. Waddell, of the third district, thinks Thurman is the coming man. Tilden is not popular enough, although he is a good man. He (Mr. Yeates) voted for the electoral commission as the only way to settle the dispute.

Mr. Alfred M. Seales, fifth district, thinks the contest rests between Thurman, Bayard and Tilden. A reaction has taken place in favor of Tilden, but before the reaction he had no chance.

Mr. Walter L. Steele, sixth district, says Tilden has no chance. There is a feeling of hostility toward him. The Democrats have been particularly fond of New York for the past ten years, and a change is necessary.

Mr. William M. Robbins, seventh district, thinks "the probabilities are that Thurman is the coming man with the country and senate, and Tilden is the coming man with the people."

Mr. Robert B. Vance, eighth district, is of the opinion that either Hendricks or Thurman will be nominated by the Democrats. He thinks these men are more acceptable to the party, particularly in the South.

It is anything but a new idea to convey an idea of the relative strength of the four candidates mentioned, further than the figures in the summary published in the first paragraph of this article, we copy the following from the Herald's editorial on the subject.
