 If trainps read the newspapers they will give Charlotte a wide berth. Thirty days on the streets! This is more work than many of them ever did in the whole course of their lives. The keeper of Elmwood cemetery wishes it said that any one desiring to visit the old cemetery in rear of the First Presbyterian church, now since the stile has been taken down, can find keys at each of the city drug stores and at Tiddy's book store. Street Commissioner Hunter has completed two substantial culverts at the intersection of Tryon and Ninth streets, one on the north and the other on the east side. The improvement is very marked, as those who have occasion to drive along there happen to know. W.R. Cochrane announces in a bold sign which hangs from the Springs building that he has opened a place there to be known as "The Cochrane House on the European plan." At present the building in the rear of the saloon will be used as the dining rooms. In the course of time Mr. Cochrane proposes to bring into requisition sever- 	around the back way, of stand in a dis- tant window and view the bloody con- test, but is hardly ever willing to put himself on record as endorsing the sport. But it is probably unfair to sup- pose that any who voted "aye" on the ordinance were bulldozed or would have voted otherwise under any cir- cumstances. It is sufficient to know that cock-fighting has been forbidden in Charlotte by its board of aldermen with only one dissenting vote. Railroad Notes. North Carolina has nineteen railroads that are either wholly or partly within her borders, the aggregate length of which, in the State, is about 1,465 miles.
