Clubfoot With Her Irish Up.

Clubfoot Julia, who has for so long a time been enjoying the repose incident to the solitude of private life, yesterday came to the front again, and afforded infinite amusement to the habitues of the cotton platform and the adjacent depots by the extreme celerity and grace which marked her movements, as, armed with a rock, she gave diligent chase to Adam Lee, who had hit her in the mouth and was escaping in the direction of Logtown.

A celestial picture of unusual attractiveness was visible in the western heaven about twilight last evening; it was the conjunction of three of the most noted of the heavenly bodiesthe moon, Venus and Mercury. The last named is an evening star just now. He reaches his greatest eastern elongation on the 29th, and is then in one of the most favorable conditions for observation that will occur during the year. At this time, a few days before and after, he may be seen a little south of the point where Venus sets. On the 29th he sets about 8 o'clock, an hour and a half after sunset; thus an excel-lent opportunity is afforded for a peep at the swift-footed and fiery planet.

A Chicken Fires a Trap Gun. A citizen of "Smithville" set a trap gun in his back yard to catch thieves who might attempt to steal any of the blooded chickens which he raises. It is one of the kind that has four barrels at right angles to each other, and is so arranged that all the barrels are fired at one time. Sunday just after daylight the residents in the vicinity were aroused by a tremendous explosion, and on investigation it was found that the gun had been shot off by one of the chickens, the owner himself having failed to rise, as is his custom, before the early birds went out to search for the historic worm. No harm was ----A Celestial Visitor Approaching.

A comet is approaching the earth and can be seen with a telescope. It moves in an elliptical orbit, with a period of five and a half years, and its first appearance was noted only thirtythree years ago, and its present appearance is the seventh time that it has been recorded. It will be nearest the earth on the 10th of April, at a computed distance of about seventy-five millions of miles, so that there is not the slightest prospect of a collision. It has never receded from the earth much farther than the planet Jupiter. In 1851 it escaped observation, but in 1857 it was seen ris- | plume. ing in the extreme southern horizon, reaching a brightness bringing it within easy observation with an opera glass, and finally disappeared in the northern

We are informed that the price paid much more than covers all the claims against it.

Women's Head Gear.

This is emphatically the season when the subject of hats and bonnets is uppermost among the ladies. A fashion writer says that out of the chaos of millinery into which the feminine mind has been plunged for the past two or three seasons, something definite has at last been evolved. It is the square cornered and open trimmed bonnet, to which the fashion has been gradually tending, but which has only been one among many other shapes, each of which has had its admirers and adherents, and all of which have been considered equally desirable. The shape, although virtually the same as that of last winter, is larger and somewhat more pronounced; more like the bonnets of fifteen years ago, and yet without their exaggerations. One thing can be said to their credit: they are almost universally becoming, very few looking otherwise than well on any face. The old-fashioned straw bonnet is not seen at all now, but in its place comes the soft chip, which is infinitely more graceful, and in the natural and beige or pale gray tints are exquisite in themselves. Soft silks, almost crepe in texture, rich, yielding ribbons with solid centres and brocaded edges, Breton lace finely pleated, and masses of tiny flowers, are used for trimming. Round hats are never out of fashion, no matter how much the bonnet may be in. For the country, for morning and for ali very informal occasions the hat has a place of its own from which it cannot be pushed. It has become a necessity; there's a dignity and a formality about a bonnet which the hat does possess, and it is unsuited for informal occasions. Besides, there is a comfort and sessed by no other article of out-door wearing apparel. Large brimmed hats, caught up with wild flowers, will be worn by young ladies for the country. while for traveling purposes and for ladies who have passed the age when broad brimmed hats are allowable. there is the lady like, modest and always becoming English walking hat, than which there's nothing in the world prettier or more graceful. These come in chip in all colors, and are trimmed with a soft scarf, carelessly wound about it, and a straight wing or cock's
