When? WILL C. BRATT, Lancaster, S. C.

Written immediately after hearing, for the first time, the song, "You'll Think of This Again Some Day."

I sat beside a maid so fair, So pure, so noble and so young, With her hair and eyes so rare, And listened while with angel's tongue, In sweetest melody she sang, "You'll think of this again."

She said it carelessly, but then Her words (because I loved them so) Went into my heart, and when My head with sleep was bending low, Sweet memories in my breast shall glow When I shall think of this again.

"You'll think of this again, some day" "I'll think of it as long as I breathe, Is with me, and I can not say, But when the day of death Hath laid me down, my spirit's rest, 'Twill need these memories of thee!"

When years have flown on Time's swift wing, "Thine" "I'll think of it as long as I breathe, Is with me, and I can not say, But when the day of death Hath laid me down, my spirit's rest, 'Twill need these memories of thee!"

That time, "some day," to me is dark; I know not of its bringings now; Not know the year, the month, the day, Deep signs of trouble on my brow— "Oh, God! I love you, 'Till I die!"

"Some day" in death's calm happy sleep, To wake no more to earthly care! Oh, may there be some one to weep, When I'm laid out, my spirit's rest! If this be true, I'll have no fears Of what hereafter is!

"Some day," perhaps, there'll wave above My head, in death's cold lid low, Sweet flowers put there, by hands of love! If this be true, I'll have no fears Of what hereafter is!

I say, perhaps, for, O, how sad, To know such things will never be; To know that in the soil I'm laid, There'll be no one to mourn for me; No one whose heart will sadder be, Than I am, when I'm laid to rest!

Jefferson Davis. An interview with the Distinguished Ex-President.

Boston, March 30.—The Herald this morning contains an interview with Jefferson Davis. After speaking of his experience in Pierce's cabinet and the Mexican war, he was led to express himself on the late rebellion, saying: "It is generally believed in the North that I am chiefly responsible for the great calamity. I was but one of the vast body of the South, and no more responsible than thousands of others. The war would have taken place without me as inevitably as it did with me. It was one of those things which were sure to come in the progress of events and in solving the great problems of government upon this continent." He conceded expressly that the abolition of slavery would be a business, for always was a manifest advantage to the white race, for it would lead to the development of the South and multiply her manufactures and mechanical industries. From the advantages of the climate alone the future of the South is more promising than that of any other section of the country, but the condition of the present generation, too, is a hindrance to the progress of the South. The abolition of slavery, he very much doubts the wisdom of attempting to educate the negro and bitterly disapproves of giving him the ballot. It was his opinion that wherever the negro race was found it must be as an inferior and servile race and in the long run would give way to a superior race under any and all circumstances. Mr. Davis acknowledged, however, that he had changed his mind entirely on one question, viz: that the great staples of the South—cotton and sugar—could be produced with greater economy and greater abundance by paid labor than by the labor of slaves. This has already been demonstrated, and that fact alone goes far to prove the advantage which the abolition of slavery has been to the whites.

Referring to the political status of the negro Mr. Davis said that the freedmen had naturally been misled by politicians, thinking Northern men were their best friends, but of late years they seemed to have reached the opposite conclusion and in the long run it would be found that the negro, having but little self-dependence, would vote in accordance with the wishes and sentiments of those who employed him. For this reason the negro vote would be a less important factor in the politics of the future than the Northern men supposed. In speaking of national affairs, he said he accepted the situation as decided by the arrangement of the sword and was very hopeful of the future of the country. He did not believe there was any existing cause for sectional estrangement and that there could be any hereafter. One of the results of the war already apparent was that the South was less dependent on the North than heretofore, for while she would supply the great staples as before, her people had begun to produce a greater variety of crops for their own use than ever before and would eventually compete with other sections in manufactures and mechanical arts. In conclusion he said: "You may imagine your people that I have no unkindness in my heart to them or any of the people of the North. I am not the devil they have painted me. I have neither horns nor hoofs, and if they knew me they would find I am very much one of themselves."

Ardeny vs. Atkinson. An Inconceivable Statement Showing Who Saved the Money to the State.

To the Editor of The Observer.—When the Legislature adjourned I was willing to leave my record with my constituents, and retire to my country home and to the peaceful pursuits of the farm, I have been highly gratifying to me and my colleagues that we have had expressions of satisfaction from you, and also from the editors of the Home and Democrat, which we construed to be the expressions of the sentiments of the citizens of our country; and while we hear no complaint from those who have a right to criticize our course, I regret exceedingly to receive criticism all the way from Buncombe, from a personal acquaintance, and had shaken Capt. Atkinson, and regret more that you are censured on my account. I thought that he and I had fought out our political differences in good faith, in the Legislature, and had shaken hands across the bloody chasm, and the lion of retrenchment and the lamb of economy had lain down in peace together; and while I disclaim any purpose in printing Capt. Atkinson's article, any undue course upon his committee, and while I acknowledge the remark was made in a heated discussion, that "his retrenchment movement has cost the State more than he had saved to the State," it was not made thoughtlessly or from any bad spirit, but based upon facts and figures, which show for themselves:

Appropriations for the past two years: Penitentiary, $240,000; Insane Asylum, 130,000; Deaf, Dumb and B. Asylum, 85,000; Printing, 13,000; Geological Survey, 5,000; Outside Lunatics, 20,000; Morganton Asylum, 60,000.

Appropriations for the ensuing two years: Penitentiary, $180,000; Insane Asylum, 100,000; Deaf, Dumb and B. Asylum, 65,000; Insane Asylum, supplemental to, 8,000; Printing, 6,000; Additional R. R. appropriations, 50,000; Oxford Orphan Asylum, 3,000; Morganton Asylum, 30,000.

Amount of reduction, 121,000. Now, he gives all the credit to the committee on retrenchment and reform. Be it far from me to detract one iota from the honor due his committee, for it was composed of as good men as the Legislature afforded; but I do say he is claiming too much for it, for the following reasons: 1st. The $60,000 saved in printing was not saved to the State, but was appropriated to the Raleigh News before his committee was appointed, and if I am not mistaken before the Legislature convened. 2d. The $85,000 saved in abolishing the geological survey was not saved to the State, but was appropriated to the State by his committee and was never considered by his committee. 3d. The $50,000 saved from support of outside lunatics involved a constitutional question, and of course all such questions are referred to the judicial committee. 4th. Give one-half the credit of the reduction in the support of the charitable and penal institutions, to the regular standing committees, for they held joint sessions with the committee on retrenchment before the appropriations were recommended to the Legislature; one-half of the savings in these institutions amounts to $55,000. That added to the $60,000 recommended by the committee, and the Raleigh News and you have $115,000, leaving a balance of $55,000 in favor of his committee. Now, I believe the superfluous discussions on retrenchment and reform cost the State more than that amount, that would be only five or six days—and for some time I feared it would absorb the entire session. I think the auditor's reports and the acts of the Legislature will sustain my statement.

As to pledges in the campaign of 1878, he could not have referred to me, as I had none in Mecklenburg, as I am truly thankful that our people are so united that they do not need any. So I was under no pledges, save to the undivided interests and untarnished honor of my constituents. As to the influence of the State officials upon the representatives, for myself I never had much to do with them except on business, for I always feared that they would think that I might be hunting an office, and I did not desire to delude them. And I am sure they all will bear me out, that I never asked anything for myself or my constituents, and one of the high officials remarked to me once that Mecklenburg never asked any favors. I must say for all our State officials that they are, in my opinion, too noble and patriotic to stoop to such a course. And I believe they have more respect for my country, if not for me, than to attempt such influences, either directly or indirectly, for they know that I have the honor to represent the second tax paying county in the State, the home of Vance and the cradle of liberty.

I did not consider the item of $17,000 for the Governor's mansion, because it was paid entirely out of the land and not from taxes, and does not come under current expenses.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have made these simple statements for the sole purpose of never asking anything for myself or the public, and not with the view of criticizing or condemning Capt. Atkinson's course in the Legislature, nor of magnifying my own.

Respectfully, Wm. E. ARDENY. Pineville, N. C., March 31, 1879.

Brief News Items. Ex-Congressman Riddle, of Tennessee, committed suicide at Lebanon, in that State, Saturday.

The jury at Richmond, Va., in the Poindexter-Curtis murder trial have so far failed to agree upon a verdict.

It is already generally known that the appropriation for the expenses of the United States courts will be exhausted in a short time, and unless Congress soon makes an appropriation the courts will have to shut up or run on tick.

Eugene Kelly, of New York, chairman of the committee of Tennessee bondholders, has telegraphed to Nashville that the compromise bill to settle the State debt at 60 cents on the dollar and a per cent interest, which the Legislature proposes to force upon bondholders, will not be accepted by them.

Hon. Daniel M. Bates, late chancellor of Delaware, died at the Ballard House, in Richmond, Va., last Friday. He was there as counsel in the suit against the Washington and Ohio Railroad Company. His remains will be taken home by his son. Distinguished members of the Virginia bar will act as an escort.

Another Savings Bank gone up! This has been said of others of late, that people beginning to look for safe investments for their surplus cash. Any man who has 25 cents to invest cannot do better than buy a box of Kodak's Liver Pills, for they never fail—always keep them in the house. mar26 1w

Woman's Best Friend. The Republicans of Congress have decided in caucus that they will refuse all bills with Democrats until the necessary appropriation bills are passed. That may make it a little long between drinks for the Democracy, but won't Republican throats also get cobwebs in them once in awhile?

Universal Acquiescence at the Bested Result. The world seems to be well satisfied with the announcement that the contract entered into by its charter from the State of Louisiana, granted for the consideration of a million of dollars to the Louisiana State Lottery Company in 1868, for twenty-five years, will be strictly adhered to. The financial relief thus afforded has maintained that noble institution, the Charity Hospital, at New Orleans, since the year 1870 (the 10th) drawing occurs on the 8th of April. For any information, a letter addressed to M. A. Dauphin, P. O. Box 692, New Orleans, La., will have immediate attention. apr 1w

A Really Beneficial Discovery. The disgust so generally felt for the taste and smell of Cod Liver Oil is almost proverbial. It seems to be peculiarly nauseous to the consumptive and scrofulous patients, to whom the whole medical profession know it is especially beneficial. Endeavors have vainly been made to disguise its objectionable characteristics, by mixture with coffee, brandy, and such like, which have impaired its efficacy as a nutrient.

But in union with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, as we find it in Scott's Emulsion, it retains its healing and nourishing properties. It is a full history of his "Down the Gorge," but one of the most powerful and pleasant tonics, that gave vital vigor to the nerves and brain. apr 1w

Woman's Best Friend. Ample testimonials from every section of the country show that Dr. Rossada's Female Regulator is as it claims to be, "Woman's best friend." Many suffering females have tried it, and have seen cures and bear witness to its efficacy in sound constitutions and rosy cheeks. Its record is before the public. Don't try to try if you are suffering from any of the complaints peculiar to the sex. feb25 1m

The Death-Rate of Our country is getting to be fearfully alarming, the average of life being lessened every year, without any reasonable cause, death resulting generally from the most insignificant origin. At this season of the year especially, a cold is such a common thing that in the hurry of every day life we are apt to overlook the dangers attending it and often find too late, that a Fever or Lung trouble has already set in. Thousands lose their lives in this way every winter, while had BOSCHER'S GERMAN SYRUP been taken, a cure would have resulted, and a large bill from a doctor been avoided. For all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, BOSCHER'S GERMAN SYRUP has proven itself to be the greatest discovery of its kind in medicine. Every Druggist in this country will sell you its wonderful efficacy. Over 950,000 bottles sold last year without a single failure known.
