

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE TRAGEDY THAT PREACHER HOUGHWORTH'S MISCONDUCT LED TO.

(Marshalltown, Iowa, April 10.) John Bell, station agent on the Central Railroad, at Marshalltown, Iowa, telegraphed to a friend in this city, two days ago, that a man should be immediately sent to relieve him, as he intended to kill himself.

The message was treated as a joke, but within an hour Bell shot a bullet through the forehead of a young woman whom he loved. He died of his wound to-day. The tragedy was the outcome of a religious revival in Gifford. The Rev. John Houghworth, an Adventist evangelist, went to that place six weeks ago, began to hold daily meetings, and soon had the neighborhood in a state of excitement.

He was 35 years of age, and eloquent. Converts were numerous, and on Saturday last (Adventist day) he baptized fourteen persons by immersion. Immediately after this ceremony he was seen by Bell slyly handing a note to Eva Roberts, who had been foremost in attracting attention to the preacher handed to her.

His jealousy had already been aroused, and, on finding this new indication of intimacy between the pair, he resolved to watch them closely. On the same afternoon the Rev. Mr. Houghworth drove away from Gifford. He said that he had been absent so long from his work and little ones that he really must visit them at his home in Liscomb, thirty miles distant.

He would return in a few days, however, and resume his revival work with probably renewed vigor. Soon afterward Miss Roberts gave a letter to Bell to post. It was addressed to some unknown name in Liscomb, and the jealous Bell suspected that it was really for Houghworth. He opened it, and found the details of a plan or meeting between the clergyman and the girl. They were to make a brief trip as husband and wife, she pretending to visit relatives and he telling his family that he was going to Gifford.

He sealed and mailed the letter, and let his sweetheart go unhindered to Houghworth. Miss Roberts came home in a train on Monday morning. Bell was waiting on the porch, and he saw her out of the car and said that he wanted to talk with her. By that time he had made up his mind what to do. At daybreak he had been seen cleaning a long unused revolver and firing at a mark. He had also sent, just before the arrival of the train, the dispatch above spoken of. The girl walked with him a short distance down the track, and then he put the revolver to her head and killed her instantly. Then he shot himself, fired two more bullets into her body, lay down by her side, took her in his arms, and waited for death. His own wound, however, did not kill until two days later.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

STORIES OF DICK TAYLOR.

Some Interesting and Characteristic Incidents of a Notable Career.

(Philadelphia Times, 14th.) The New York papers of yesterday devote much space to anecdotes of General Dick Taylor, the famous Confederate officer, who died in that city on Saturday.

General Taylor's first remarkable service in the war was in Stonewall Jackson's famous campaign in the Valley of Virginia. At Port Republic the Louisiana Brigade carried the day and responded with cheers to Jackson's command, "The ladies must be taken!"

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.

General Taylor was not a great admirer of Jackson, whom he has described as a man given over to lemonsucking and perversions. On this occasion riding on the flank of the column, he saw Jackson beside him.