HOME PERCLINES.

A good deal of excitement was created in a certain portion of the city yesterday afternoon by a lady administering landanum to one of her children by mistake for paregoric. An emetic was promptly given and no harm resulted.

C. M. I. Commencement.

At the commencement of the Caro-At the commencement of the Carolina Military Institute, June 13th next, the annual address before the corps of cadets will be delivered by the Rev. Ellison Capers, of Greenville, S. C. Mr. Capers, who is well known as an accomplished orator as well as a popular divine, was a Confederate brigadier. The commencement sermon on June 5th will be preached by the Rev. Wm. R. Atkinson, the efficient principal of the Charlotte Institute for Young Ladies. Railroad Notes.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Chester & Lenoir Narrow Gauge Railroad, for the election of efficient will be held at Newton next Thursday, the 15th, and it is learned upon good authority that there is a very strong probability of Col. Wm. Johnston of this city, being elected president.

The summer schedule on the eastern division of the Carolina Central will go into effect on the 18th inst. The mail and passenger trains, under this schedule, will arrive here at 8.10 a m. and leave at 8.20 p. m. Connection will be made here with the Statesville train, and at Hamlet, we suppose, with trains on the Raleigh and Augusta Air Line.

Mr. Asthur I Rull is present another musical archive made his direction, it is unnecessary to say that something well worth hearing is abcord of us. ander, chief marshal, marched to the cemetery, where already a much larger crowd had gathered. The procession moved towards the soldiers' plat to the time of muffled drums. Near the graves was erected a stand, on which sat the members of the memorial association and others who were to participate in the exercises, and around which soldiers, firemen, citizens, ladies and children gathered. A gentle breeze was wafted over the hill and the assemblage was protected from the sharp rays of the sun by a thin layer of fleecy clouds. The exercises here were opened by a dirge sung by a choir of male voices. Following this was an appropriate and beautiful prayer by Rev. E, H. Harding, a hymn by the choir, and then Mr. F. B. McDowell read the roll of honor, embracing the names of several hundred soldiers of Mecklenburg county who lost their lives in the Confederate cause The chief marshal then introduced Col. J. P. Thomas, who delivered a chaste, elegant and exceedingly appropriate address.

After the recital of a portion of one of the hymn just sung, expressive of the feelings with which we should engage in a service so solemn and so full of mourning, the speaker said that he did not come before his hearers with an elaborately prepared address; he did not propose to attempt to give them Ionic eloquence, or Corinthian richness, but Doric simplicity and truth, relying on the occasion to suggest suitable thoughts and utterances.

Discussing the cause, the occasion, and the consequences of these annual convocations, he affirmed that he who | ed. now asserted or historians who might the Southern people, and he trusted that | expected to make their reports. He then proceeded to show that the contest had arisen from issues which had divided two great political parties years before, the one maintaining the described for the contest had a risen from issues which had divided two great political parties there. Rev. Stephen Lyon, of the monastery in Gaston, will officiate at St. Peter's doctrine of States' rights and the other arguing in favor of a national government. With the Southern people the North doctrine of States' rights was a principle considered it their duty to provide new grounds for their security.

After tracing the story of the secession of the States, a comparison of the bravery and self-sacrifice of Southern soldiers with those who had bled and died in the religious and civil wars of Europe, and a beautiful tribute to the conduct of the women of the South during the trying times of the war, and, if possible the more trying times which followed it, he proceeded to discuss the duties of the living to the dead.

Among the first of these duties was the erection of a suitable monument to perpetuate their memory. A marble shaft was a constant reminder of their virtues and as such tended to keep alive the better feelings in our own natures. God himself had set the example in the works of nature, But our intellecthal duties were even more binding. We could not better honor the dead than by improving the intellectual and inoral natures which God had given us, and contributing to the material prosperity of our country. Now that we were under the constitution of the United States and should uphold it and be der the constitution of the United States and should uphold it and be ready to protect it under all circum-

After a touching allusion to the ceremony about to be performed, of scattering flowers ever the graves, the speaker closed by quoting the poem of Henry Timrod, sung on memorial day in Charlotte in 1867, the last verse of which is

Stoop angels hither from the skies; There is no holier spot of ground,
Than where defeated valor lies,
By mourning beauty crowned.

At the conclusion of the address, the graves were covered with a rich profusion of flowers by ladies and children, and the large crowd shortly afterwards left the cemetery.

The military companies as has been their custom for several years marched to the grave of a Union soldier in another part of the cemetery and covered it with the floral offerings.

The name of the cantata has not yet been announced but will be in due time. The idea which Mr. Butt has conceived is a "taking" one and we are very sure that he will carry it out in a manner which will reflect credit upon himself as well as upon the children.
