AMONG THE FARMERS.

A General Thriftiness—Everybody Working—Effects of the Fertilizer Law.

A citizen of this county stopped a group of persons a few days ago and read them part of a communication he had written for the Toronto Herald. The communication was published at Raleigh, in which he had reported a conversation with a well-known and intelligent farmer from Charlotte. The writer asks the farmer why it was that the people of his section of the county were buying more fertilizer and planting more corn this year than usual.

Those who heard the article, some of whom were persons engaged in farming themselves, were enabled to utilize a large quantity of land which had been lying out for years, and which they could not have used to advantage had they been subjected to the expense of fencing it in. He added that this was not only true of his own section, but of other parts of the county in a more or less degree.

This revolution—for it is hardly short of that—cannot be wholly ascribed, as a matter of course, to the existence of the stock law, although this has given the impetus which intelligent and industrious farmers have been slow to take advantage of. It is a matter of fact that the farming classes are working, with greater energy and to a better purpose than ever before.

The farmers of Mecklenburg are progressive, intelligent and enterprising; they are recovering from the effects of the general depression and the low prices of cotton the past few years, and today they are not inferior to any county in the State can boast.

TRAGEDY AT ROCK HILL, S. C.

Fatal shooting of Church Williford by J. M. Gault.

Yesterday afternoon, at Rock Hill, S. C., J. M. Gault, 25, and Church Williford, 20, were engaged in a quarrel in the city in regard to the transaction over the wires and by passengers, are contradictory in their charges. It is a fact, however, that the two persons named—both young men and the first a merchant—were paying attention to the same lady; that some days ago the lady attended a picnic in company with Caston, on which occasion Williford made some remark about Caston which, reaching the ears of the latter, so offended him that he determined to seek revenge at the first opportunity.

Another story tells the origin of the difficulty, claiming, except that it grew out of some occurrence at a picnic, and says that Williford's business at Yorkville, whence he returned yesterday morning, was to see the father of the lady, and to see that she was given in marriage to the man of his choice.

Naturally the occurrence was the occasion of a great deal of excitement at Rock Hill, and some of the passengers from down the railroad, the popular feeling ran very high—so much so that the slayer, immediately upon being taken under arrest, was hurried to the jail as a measure of protection.

Caston, we are informed, has heretofore borne a most excellent character. Williford was regarded as a clever man, and a dangerous one under the influence of drink.

The number of bills in the South seems to peculiarly favor three special accounts of the general ledger, to-wit: the "monthly" account, the "quarterly" account, and the "annual" account.
