

THE DEATH OF YOUNG NAPOLEON.

The first news of the death of Louis Napoleon, Prince Imperial of France, is confirmed by telegrams printed elsewhere to-day. The cable dispatch characterizes the young man as adventurous, and led him to his death. Youthful and impetuous, a soldier by birth and instinct, he sought a position in the English army engaged with the Zulus upon the Cape, from a natural love of military life and from dislike of the regiment which life in his native country, or in England, for the matter of that, necessarily implies.

We free Americans despise the institutions of monarchy, and yet around the name Napoleon there clusters so much of glory that we cannot bear without some regret of the death of the last representative of that illustrious line. While the French would not have back the empire, for of them, we believe, will be able to suppress a sigh when they associate this recent event with the achievements which have been wrought out by France by the name of Napoleon, that name that he bore. As for the Bonapartists, this news will drive a pang to their hearts and carry dismay into their ranks. It was he whom they had hoped would restore the empire; all their hopes and expectations have been founded upon the prince imperial and without him, their guiding star, an end comes to all their dreams.

There is one whose suffering in this event will challenge the sympathy of the world: that one is the ex-Empress. Deprived but a few years ago of her husband, whom death overtook under the saddest of circumstances, and while he yet suffered the sharp mortification of defeat, she was left in the world, banished from France, with no comfort in life save this boy—for he was no more than a boy, being but twenty-three years of age when he died. Her lot is one of singular sadness, and if not for the sake of the name he bore, at least in sympathy for his womanly mother France can afford to uncover her head in the presence of the corpse of the last of the Napoleons.

It is stated that there are a variety of speculations in Washington as to the result of the fierce passage-at-arms in the Senate, Wednesday night, between Lamar and Conkling. Both sat in the Senate all the night, after the heated colloquy, and looked cool and unconcerned, and Lamar left the next day for Mississippi, to talk to the "sweet-girl graduates" at one of the educational institutions of his State.

The fierce partisan debate in the Senate Wednesday developed such a state of affairs that the Democrats, it is said, are telegraphing for all absent Senators to return and get relieved of their pairs. There may yet be fun in Washington before the extra session expires.

THE ARMY AT THE POLLS.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—SENATE.—Davis, of West Virginia, from the floor, was called on by the majority to report the resolution fixing a date of adjournment, but hoped to be able to do so soon.

Horace rose to a privileged question and presented the report of the conference committee on the judicial expenses bill and asked its present consideration.

Conkling said he did not know how far the committee had confined themselves to adjusting the disagreeing vote and objected to considering the report in view of the misunderstanding on the army bill.

After an animated discussion, Wallace withdrew the report and Carpenter proceeded to speak on the army bill. Carpenter argued that the fifth section of the present bill would prevent the President from using troops at the polls even when called for by States since the army, if used at all, must necessarily be used as a police force.

Ingalls then read a speech sustaining the President's action in vetoing the appropriation bills, during which there was a desultory discussion of the charge made by Ingalls that the Southern Democrats intimidated colored Republicans and that this was the cause of the Kansas episode.

Horace is disposing of business of a private character reported from committees. Goode, of Virginia, from the committee on epidemic diseases, reported a bill appropriating $200,000 for the purchase of a quarantine hospital in Hampton Roads, Va. Referred to the committee of the whole.

The Speaker then called for reports of a private character and Mr. Conkling reported on the petition of Daniel M. Cook for evaporating cane juice was amended so as to prohibit suits for infringement prior to this act, and then passed.

The House went into committee of the whole on the report of the committee on the petition of Daniel M. Cook for evaporating cane juice was amended so as to prohibit suits for infringement prior to this act, and then passed.

THE WAY VANDERBILT SUCCEEDED. When Commodore Vanderbilt was running steamboats, he beat all rivals by crowding on steam to the utmost and even running down his enemy if necessary, to accomplish a triumph when he went into railroading, he adopted a much shrewder and more successful way.

What is Scrofula. It is a consumption of the body, and differs only from Pulmonary Consumption, in that the tubercle does not attack the lungs of life, and hence the patient lives for a long time, but it arises from the same cause, is the offspring of the same parent, and consequently requires the same treatment.

Case Attainable by the Rheumatic. Yes, although they may despair of relief, it is attainable by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for there is a remedy which carries off, by means of increased activity of the kidneys—important channels for blood purification—excesses of uric acid, which is the cause of the disease.
