Henderson Alford, colored, charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff Passmore of Wake, two or three years ago, has had another trial in Wake court, his counsel having been changed for his first conviction and secured a new trial. On this occasion he was convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

Wilmington Star: The revival at the Front Street M. E. church, instead of abating, seems ready to be increasing in interest. It is a revival of the old-fashioned kind, and several have professed conversion within the last two or three days. Dr. Burkhead has left to fill his appointments.

Wilmington Herald: Mr. Chas. Harris is the party to whom we referred some days since having been arrested on the charge of having robbed the postoffice in this city on decoration day of a sum of money. His examination was had Saturday morning before United States Commissioner McQuinn and resulted in a full and honorable acquittal, there not having been a particle of evidence adduced that would sustain the charge.

Judge Eure, sitting in judgment in Wake court last week upon the case of a young darkey charged with robbing the postoffice in this city on decoration day of the lower house of the last Legislature, asked him to ever want to be a lawyer, and receiving a negative answer to that question, and an affirmative answer to the question if he would not like to, told the young man that he would send him for five years to a place where he could go to a State Sunday school every Sabbath. The incident is related by the Raleigh News.

School Exhibition at Statesville. Correspondence of The Observer.

STATESVILLE, N. C., June 27.—After the usual preparation the tenth annual exhibition of Mrs. Billingsley's school came off last night, in the court house, adorned with vases of fine flowers, beautiful wreaths and rings of living green, illuminated with gasolene lamps, the appearance of grand and imposing. I never saw the court house so crowded before. Every aisle and corner was jammed. After a sweet strain of music by the choir, the exercises were opened by one of Moody's hymns, the exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Wood, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The performance consisted of declamations, dialogues, essays and addresses, were listened to with what attention, some of the dialogues, such as "They have stolen the liquor in town," were given with simplicity, naturalness and impressiveness that is but seldom exceeded. The essays, written in plain, simple English, and pervaded with a deep moral vein, and read with a good degree of feeling and good impression. Some of them received high commendation from some of the ministers present.

After the pieces came the distribution of prizes, and the scholars each received a prize of a nice little book for standing high in their classes. Miss Emma Greenlee received a present of a nice gilt-edge Bible for committing the Shorter Catechism.

Enlivened with the singing of the scholars and the music of the band, all passed off finely. Everybody seemed delighted; many say it was the best exhibition we have ever had. The amount of education received such an impulse last night as will not be soon forgotten. The attention to study, and the progress made the past year, has scarcely been equalled for ten years.

One of the white people was unusually large, among whom was Mrs. Grant, principal of the Simpson Female College, of this place.

After the benediction, by Rev. Mr. Pressley, pastor of the Seceder church, all quietly dispersed to their respective homes. EYE WITNESS.

Was Garrison an Infidel? W. H. H. in the York.

In the Sun of June 17th, Oliver Johnson is represented as saying: "There is neither truth nor reason in characterizing Garrison as an infidel. Now I think it will not be hard to find that in the many years of the anti-slavery agitation Mr. Garrison was called an infidel by most Christians and was regarded as such by some at least of his friends and associates." In the Hartford Bible convention in 1854, which was broken up by a mob of theological students, he made a strong speech on the so-called infidel side. In 1867 he noised in the Liberator a pamphlet, entitled "Self-Contradictions of the Bible" in these words:

"It is an internal exhibition of the utter absurdity of the dogma of plenary inspiration, showing as it does, at a glance, the multitudinous self-contradictions of the Bible, which no ingenuity of interpretation can reconcile, excepting that which can prove white to be black and black white."

I am willing to concede that Mr. Garrison was more of a Christian after the pattern of Christ than most of his prosessedly Christian adversaries; but seems to me there is neither truth nor reason in attempting to evade the fact that in the proper acceptance of the term he was an infidel.

Advices from Hong Kong to June 1st state that Gen. Grant was then en route from Trenton to Peking, and that considerable change in the programme of his future movements is indicated. It is now believed probable that he may return to China after visiting Japan, and proceed to Australia. His plans are subject to so many sudden alterations, however, that nothing absolutely certain is known a month in advance.

Joseph A. Blair, paying teller of the Mechanics' National Bank, of New York, residing at Mount Clinton, N. J., has been arrested for the latter part of shooting his coachman, John Armstrong, an Irishman, in the stable, last Thursday evening. Blair was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, where he lies at present. He stated that Blair was in a passion because he had stopped at a beer saloon, and followed him to his room, where he shot him. Blair's defense is that he supposed Armstrong was about to shoot him, and fired in self-defense. The laboring men are greatly incensed, and threatened to lynch Blair, who was placed under arrest.

An Inebriate's Victim. The Boston Commercial Bulletin tells the following story of a young man who was taken to a home for inebriates for treatment.

In three days Mr. Coles had brought the young man through all the dangers of delirium tremens, and had placed him, as it were, on his feet.

"How do you feel?" said Mr. Coles, when his patient had recovered his senses.

"Very well, indeed," said Mr. Coles, gathered up the young man's clothes in his arms, including his boots and shoes, and carried them down stairs.

When Mr. Coles left the room the patient was determined to procure some spirits. His room was two stories from the street, but there was a pipe that ran from the roof to the ground—a water spout.

"I can descend by that," said he. He looked around for his clothes; there was a pair of old slippers. The money he had in his pockets when he was brought to the asylum was in the bureau-drawer of his room. The young man tore the sheets of his bed into strips and wound the strips around his legs, making a pair of pantaloons; then he took a comforter from his bed, cut holes in it for his arms, and slipped down. Going into the bathroom he found a large sponge. He cut a slit in this with his razor, and putting his head into the slit he had a fair start at once. Then raising his window he pulled outside and slid down the water spout, with the money he had in his possession when he came into the institution in the crown of his sponge hat.

Half an hour later Mr. Coles, in passing, saw him on his way to the street, and heard a noise of great hilarity, and thinking that he recognized the voice of his patient, dropped in. There he was with his dressing gown, sponge hat and his right hand on the centre of an admiring circle, drinking whisky punches and rattling off jokes at the rate of twenty a minute.

A Woman's Party. "Stag" balls have been frequent in this country, but we believe that only the society in New York called the "Sorosis" has ever ventured upon the innovation of a party made up exclusively of women. But an American lady prominent in what is called the "American colony" in Paris, has invented a new and amusing amusement—a woman's matinee party, to which fifty ladies were invited and all were excluded, even the waiting, as the table being done by women. The party was so successful that the amusement is likely to become fashionable. The cards of invitation had a tea-pot engraved upon them, and the ladies are said to have enjoyed themselves exceedingly. The women lasted for a whole day, and the ladies wore their newest spring costumes, and, of course, no men being present, the discussion of dress was subject to no limitations or restrictions whatever. The success of these women's matinees, must suffice to refute those cynical philosophers who have been used to maintain that a commonwealth of women would perish from interminable strife.

Fourth of July Budge. Augusta (Ga.), Evening News.

The old First North Carolina Battalion of Sharpshooters will have a reunion and celebration on the 4th of July, at Winston, N. C. This battalion was commanded by Maj. Wilson, now a resident of Augusta, and prominently engaged in tobacco manufacturing in this city. Maj. Wilson will go on to the "Far West" and take part in the celebration of his old comrades. He will carry with him one of the prettiest, most elegant and appropriate badges ever gotten up in this city, fashioned by artist hand or turned out from the printing establishment of Sainsman & Paul. The badges will be printed on silk, and are intended as gifts from Maj. Wilson to his battalion.

The badge is appropriately inscribed, "The Old First North Carolina Battalion of Sharpshooters," and with Appomattox printed at the bottom under the title of this battalion that served with grand distinction through the war. The coat of arms of North Carolina hold the top place on the badge, while the center piece is one of the best arranged coats of Confederate flags ever seen.

Does It Hurt? Burlington Herald.

"Does that hurt?" kindly asked the dentist, holding the young man's head back and jabbing a steel probe, with back-set teeth, clear down through his aching tooth and into the gum. "Does that hurt?" he asked, with evident feeling. "Oh, no," replied the young man, in a voice suffused with emotion and sentiment; "Oh, no," he said tenderly, rising from the chair and holding the dentist by the hand, while he dragged his lungs out of his chest, and pulled the tooth then. "But by that time the astonished tooth had forgot its aching."

45 Years Before the Public. THE GENUINE DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS

FOR THE CURE OF Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint, DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are constive, sometimes alternate with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of heaviness on the left side of the head; ought to have been done. A slight dry cough is sometimes attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where fewer than these existed, yet examination of the body after death has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.
