VOLOXX.88A 10-TERIT CHARLOTTE, N. C. WENDESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1879.

ELLA WHEELER. These hearts, these hearts of ours!
Last night I told Augustus I was his,
Told him I loved him, and reached up my mouth
For his caresses—tender kiss on kiss—
As flowers reach up for dewdrope, in a drouth.
These hearts, these hearts of ours!

To-day I saw Laertes, my old love, I know not wherefore, but a strange unrest, A doubt, a thrill, seemed, suddenly to move The heart that yester e'en lay in my breast Like some contented bird housed in its nest, Alas, these hearts of ours!

I do not love Laertes. Long ago
I cast him by as worthless. Yet he wore
So bright a face to-day. I long to know
If he has quite forgotten all he swore
In those old love-lit days that are no more.
Thuse hearts these hearts of core!

when my voice spoke his name? Have I no art
Wherewith to stir a heart that loved so much
In that dead past? Or does he play a part?
Alas! these hearts of ours! Could be forget that past—his past and mine?
Royal as summer, glowing as the South?
How could I let Augustus kiss the mouth
Where once his kisses poured like nectared wine
Alas, Laertes is no longer mine!
Alas, these hearts of ours!

OBSERVATIONS.

The total number of emigrants arriving at Castle Garden last week was only 1935, a falling off of 1457 from the week previous. The latest poem starts out, "Though I were dead my heart would beat for thee." There is evidently nothing mean about her.

"A man who strikes a woman is a scoundrel," remarks an exchange. Is a man who meets a lady for the first time, and strikes her favorably, to be condemned, we should like to ask?

In the French Chamber: A Deputy holding forth from the tribune.

The President—"The gentleman must be more moderate in his expressions."

The Deputy—"Impossible, Mr. President—my speech is written out?"

A new style of earring is a small gridiron upon which a ruby heart is supposed to be roasting. If the designer had been a fresh newspaper joker he would have put a herring upon such an earring.—

Norristown Herald.

A poet sings: "Let us look in the glass for a moment. Let us brush off the mist from the face." No-thank you. We don't imbibe. If we did, we'd blow off the froth and close our eyes for a moment. A New York physician says you can drink more that way without the stuff going to your head

A young man made his appearance at Deadwood last week in a pair of white trousers. He was promptly escorted to the cars, put on board of them, and an injunction placed upon him never to revisit the place. "We can stand a blied shirt, you know," a miner exclaimed, "but when it comes to wearin' blied drawers we just make them git up

Human nature is a singular mixture of inconsistences. A Northern exchange well remarks: "There are lots of people who will calmly see an unfortunate family starve to death just across their back alley, who will send hunches and bouquets to a cross-eyed, death-sentenced murderer in jail." This has especial reference to the obtuse people, mostly women, who send bouquets and delicacies to the miscreant Cox, the convicted murderer of Mrs. Hull

One day Bilty and Sammy were playing by a mud-hole, and Billy he said: "Now, Sammy, les play we was a bein-yard; you be the pig, and lied down and woller, and I'll be a buil, and belier like everything." So they got down on their hands and knees, and Sammy he went in the dirt and wallowed, while Billy bellowed like distant thunder. Bimeby Sammy he came up muddy—you never saw such a muddy little fellow—and he said: "Now, you'll be the pig and let me beller." But Billy he said: "I ain't a very good pig except for dinner, and it'ill be time 'aun' for you to beller when let mother sees yer close."

Preaching on the Lawn at Long Branch.

Long Branch.

Long Branch, N. J., August 3.—The most remarkable feature at this watering place this season occurred at 5 o'clock this evening, on the lawn in front of the Ocean Hotel. The Rev. William P. Corbett, the Methodist Episcopal minister, who attended the morning service in Ocean Grove, had arranged to preach to the guests and Sunday excursionists at the Branch at 5 p. m. Just after the steamer Adelaide had left the pier, a Southern steamship passed and saluted the pier. As the echoes of the gun died away the crowd of ladies and gentlemen congregated in front of the Ocean Hotel. Willisford Day, of Ocean Grove, conducted the singing, assisted by the cornet of the Ocean Hotel band. After the singing of "Old Hundred," the Rev. Mr. Corbett offered prayer "for the rich and and poor—the Jew and the Gentile," closing with the hope that "at the end of earthly life we may be swung over Jordan on the downy wing of an angle into everlasting bliss." The congregation then sang "All hail the power of Jesus name," The preacher then spoke from the text of Acts we chapter, 38 and 39 and part of the 40th verse. During the service the congregation continued to increase and paid great and respectful attention. It had been expected by the pier company and the directors of the Plymouth Rock that Mr. Corbett would preach on the steamer while on the way to New York, but that was found inexpedient, and hence the service on the shore. The service closed with prayer and benediction about 6. p. m.

A Social Scandal.

Some time last January a young lady of Augusta came to Atlanta, accompanied by a prominent man of that city. Two months ago a child was born to the young lady, and the young lady was unmarried. The prominent man was said to be the child's father. A married lady of Atlanta took an interest in the matter, and promised her assistance in having the child adopted by respectable people. Together they applied to a gentleman doing business on Whitehall. He agreed to take the baby, but when he saw it, the child was so sick of inflammation of the bowels that he refused. One day last week the child died, and the Whitehall gentleman was requested to have it buried, which he did, the expenses being defrayed by the benevolent Atlants lady.

All parties to this transaction belong to the upper crust of society, and we only refrain from giving names because there is one of these whose name we cannot get just now, and we do not wish to give any without all of them.

YOKOHAMA, July 17. The reception of ex-President Grant in Tokio is unprecedented in Japanese history. In addition to the demonstrations by the government, citizens have given entertainments on a sumptions scale. Every day and night there were fresh novelties for his diversion. Gen. Grant had an audience with the Emperor on July 4, his Majesty alluding happily to a co-incidence of the date. The sole obstacle to harmony is caused by the de-meanor of the English officers, who persistently keep aloot from Gen. Grant, and decline to give salutes or recogni-tion. It is not clearly understood whether or not this is in consequence of or-der from home. There is much com-ment thereupon, and it is distinctly known that Gen. Grant is keenly sensi-tive to slights. CHARMED BY A SNAKE An Ohio Girl for Weeks in the Power Mt. Vernon Letter to Cincinnati Commercia

A very rare psychological phenomena was related to us by Mr. Campbell, about a snake's influence over a young lady living east of Mt. Vernon, by the name of Bertha Miller. For some weeks the parents had noticed that their daughter was showing marks of declining health, evidenced by an increasing paleness and emaciation and accompanied by a melancholy mood. So marked was the change becoming that they began feeling great solicitude concerning her and consulted a physician of this city about the matter. The physician visited the girl, but was unable to explain the cause of her decline or to render her aid. It also fell under the observation of her mother that each afternoon, about three o'clock, the girl would leave the house and remain away from one to two hours. This fact, befrom one to two hours. This fact being communicated to the other parent, it was decided to watch the young lady and discover if possible the reason for such habitual absence. Accordingly on the day following when the hour had about arrived the father left the house and watched for the going of his daughter. In a few minutes the young girl ter. In a few minutes the young girl was on her way through a wood and up a ravine leading from the house to a small stone quarry, some half-mile distant, reaching which she took a seat on a flat stone, under a small clump of trees, and remained sitting there quietly for several minutes, her head held in one position, and eyes evidently fixed on one spot. The father had gotten up so near by this time that he could observe all that would happen. In a few moments, to his amazement, there proceeded from the direction in which the girl was looking a snake about four feet ceeded from the direction in which the girl was looking a snake about four feet in length, and known to him as our common black snake or racer. So astonished was he at the peculiar manner of his daughter and the appearance of the reptile that he remained quiet in his concealment to observe what would happen. The snake crept slowly along towards the girl until it halted close to her feet. After remaining there motionless for a minute or more and gazing fixedly into the face of the girl, it slowly and stealthily began creeping toward her, and in a moment lay coiled toward her, and in a moment lay coiled in her lap. |The girl remained perfectly motionless, apparently not the least alarmed at the presence of her visitor, but gazing intently at it. After lying in that position for a short while, it slowly uncoiled, crept down to the ground and back to its hiding place in the rocks. The girl remained sitting motionless for a considerable time, and then got up and retraced her steps to the house. On the next day the father, at the appointed time, took his gun and proceeding to the scene killed the reptile. The girl, startled at the report of the gun, sprang to her feet, but immediately recognizing her father, proceeded without further ado back home with him. She, when interrogated, could give no intelligible reason for visiting the spot, except that at a certain hour she felt strongly inclined to go and sit there. She has rapidly recovered her health, and appears in no wise affected in her mind. Experts can offer no solution to this strange proceeding, the most intelligent being that the animal possessed a powerful mesmeric influence, and had so wrought upon the mind of the girl that she went automatically to the place. This, in connection with an accumulated inherited disposition to be beguiled by a serpent transmitted from our first mother. Eve—offers the only rational explanation. alarmed at the presence of her visitor,
