But the vehicle almost instantly came to view and proved to be a small wagon an buy arrantdrawn by one horse in a wild ruuaway, drawn by one horse in a wild ruuaway, the occupants being powerless to check him. He dashed upon the bridge, and approached the buggy of Mr. D. who could not turn, and his only escape was by jumping out, leaving his vehicle to its fate, and saving himself by clinging to one of the braces of the bridge, and hanging over the water, twenty feet be-low. As it passed the runaway wagon very of ectfully or for hanging over the water, twenty feet be-low. As it passed, the runaway wagon struck him on the leg, bruising it badly and tearing his trousers, and then it came in collision with the buggy, and was brought to a sudden check, violent-ly throwing out the young men, and bruising them badly; they were glad to escape being hurled over into the water below. ER. -----2.00 \mathbf{E} A Brave Lady. Charleston News and Courier, 12th. Yesterday afternoon, about 6 o'clock, a horse, attached to a buggy in which two ladies were riding, took fright at the Forks of the Road, and dashed down to loca-

ing no hope of a rational solution, he finally took his hat, and, entering the carriage, went down to the pier, stopping on the way at Billington's restau-rant. Scarcely had he arrived there and got out of the conveyance than ex-Gov. Sprague, who had followed, came up, and it is therefore certain that the latter must have kept his horse hitched up ready for use to follow Senator Conkling. On the arrival of ex-Gov. Sprague at Billington's, another exchange of words took place. Sifted down the foregoing are the principal facts in the case, so far as Mr. Conkling and Mr. Sprague are concerned. As to the alleged cause of the hostility of Mr. Sprague to Mr. Conkling, it is on-ly certain that the German teacher, so indiscreetly and foolishly brought into the matter, had nothing whatever to do with it. On Thursday night, according to ex-Gov. Sprague himself, he could not sleep. He said to a tradesman the Aas not been one internet Incendiaries burned the barn and sta-ble of Mr. Jas. He said to a tradesman the next day that his mind was troubled; ar that he could get no rest, and that ar house that Friday morning were no-ticed by a good many people as being ticed by a good many people as being very strange, but no one thought he contemplated personal injury towards any individual. After the encounter Mrs. Sprague went to a Mr. Perry's, near by, and subsequently to the Tower House, where it is understood she re-mained over night. Saturday she gave orders to have her trunks packed at the ex-Governor's house, and put on the train for Providence. She sent her children and maid to the depot nearest the Tower Hill House, and said she the Tower Hill House, and said she would take the cars at Narragansett Pier depot, which she subsequently did, and met her family higher up the line. Before her departure for Providence, however, Mrs. Sprague went to the Lake Side House, near Silver Lake. She drove there and called out Prof. Linck, who is the German teacher towards whom Senator Sprague is said to feel such a pronounced antipathy. She ex-changed a few words with him, which changed a few words with him, which may have given rise to the introduction may have given rise to the introduction of his name into the story. Soon after-wards Mrs. Sprague went to the pier depot for Providence. Ex-Gov. Sprague went to Providence Saturday, but he did not see his wife, going on a differ-ent train. That ex-Senator and Mrs. Sprague have been on most unhappy terms for some time is a matter of gen-eral notoriety here. A few weeks ago eral notoriety here. A few weeks ago a gentleman whose family are staying at Narragansett Pier, called on Mrs. Sprague, and, sending in his card, saw her. He had known her for many years, her. He had known her for many year but had never met her husband. H suggested to Mis. Sprague that he woul like to leave a card for the ex-Senato personally, as he desired to have th pleasure of meeting him. Mrs. Sprague in reply, said that she was quite unabl to answer for anything that Mr. S might think or do. She had taken n responsibility for his conduct for long responsibility for his conduct for lon time, and it was not likely she cou long remain in the same house with him. the Forks of the Road, and dashed down the shell-road at an alarming pace. There was no gentleman in the buggy, and, as the road was thronged with ve-hicles, the situation was a perilous one. One of the occupants fainted, and was in danger of being thrown from the bug-gy, but her companion who held the reins, supported her insensible friend with one hand, and guided the runaway The Tennessee Debt.
