THE PETHEL TRIAL.

DID HE POISON HIS WIFE ! Commencement of the Case-Only a Part of the Evidence Taken, and

One Branch of the Case Touched

The morning hour of the Superior Court yesterday was entirely consumed in the selection of the jury for the trial of George Pethel for the murder of his wife, formerly Alice Partee, by poisoning. The court room was packed from the beginning by a crowd which made no attempt to conceal their eagerness to have all of a case which from its page.

hear all of a case, which from its peculiar nature, and its several removals—first from Rowan, where the tragedy is alleged to have been enacted, to Iredell, and then to Mecklenburg—has for a long time occupied public attention. Solicitor Montgomery is assisted in the prosecution by Capt. Chas. Price, of Salisbury; for the defence appear, Messrs. Shipp & Bailey, of this city, and Messrs. J. W. Mauney and J. M. Gray, of Salisbury. Hon. R. F. Armfield was to have assisted in the prosecution, but is not in attendance upon the court.

The following is the jury selected: J. S. Phillips, W. S. Alexander, F. B. McWhirter, A. M. Stewart, R. J. Sifford, J. R. Baker, J. E. Griffith, W. N. Price, H. C. Irwin, D. K. Sing, A. F. Torrence, D. W. Oates. Solicitor Montgomery is assisted in the

D. W. Oates.

There was nothing peculiar noticeable about the demeanor of the prisoner, a young man of twenty-three. He was composed and his conduct was marked by the most watchful attention to all that was said on the trial. His counsel had evidently prepared the case well and only occasionally was it necessary to consult with him.

When the court opened in the after-noon, the solicitor stated what he pro-who had bought strychnine from him on or about the 1st of February, 1878, and replied that he did not. To the question, did you see any one on the occasion referred to filling the description of the prisoner, the defence elegication of the prisoner, the defence elegication of the prisoner, the defence elegication of the prisoner, all intended to show that the prisoner had purchased or proposed to purchase strychnine from the witness, to each of which objection was made, on the ground that the witness had said at the outset that he did not recognize the who had bought strychnine from him ground that the witness had said at the outset that he did not recognize the prisoner. The judge allowed the question, did any one apply to you for strychnine on the day designated, and the witness replied that if he did, he (witness) did not know his name. Exception was taken to this question by the defence. In reply to the query did anybody apply to you on that day, the witness said that a young man with a fuzzy beard, about the size of the prisoner, did. He wore an ordinary farmer's dress, and there was nothing

Joel Corry, a citizen of Rowan, and a neighbor of the prisoner, remembered to have accompanied him to Concord on the 2d of February. Capt. Goodnight, another neighbor, was with them and they all rode into town together, the prisoner being on a mule belonging to Mr. John Blackwelder, They made army trial to the cross examination he said he wasn't at the funeral, nor the inquest; didn't know there was a preliminary trial; first said he never told anybody what he saw until he saw Mr. Price, the lawyer at Charlotte court, and afterwards said he told Mr. Jo McLean, two or three weeks after the prisoner afternoon. They had gotton on their horses and were about to start home, when Pethel said he had to get something at the drug store. He accordingly went to Morrison's drug store, where N. D. Fetzer staid. The witness was near the store on his horse and overheard Pethel say something about that being what he wanted but not in the quantity. Pethel then went to Gibson's drug store, and the witness and Good-night rode on. When Pethel caught up he asked him if he got what he wanted, to which Pethel said yes, at the same time pulling out a package four to six inches long, and which, according to the best of his recollection, was wrapped in reddish paper; wasn't positive as to the color of the paper.

Cape Goodnight also testified to having accompanied the prisoner to Concord on this occasion; caught up with ing accompanied the prisoner to Concord on this occasion; caught up with him and Joel Corry on the way. The prisoner's wife and sister had been picking cotton for him and he owed them $175, which the prisoner asked him for. He paid him the money that day in Concord, and saw the prisoner buy three small sacks of salt, two or three pounds of coffee, and a small bundle of sugar. The prisoner was three pounds of coffee, and a small bundle of sugar. The prisoner was riding Blackwelder's mule; when they got ready to go, Pethel called at a drug store door for round lamp wicks, but did not get them, and then went to the other drug store. When witness came back he saw Pethel with a small package wrapped in red paper, about four inches long; it looked like a bottle. That evening he parted with him at his (the prisoner's) father's; saw him the next morning. The witness could not next morning. The witness could not recollect whether or not the prisoner had any beard then; never saw him again until after his wife was dead. He saw the body when it was taken up and recognized it as that of Alice Pethel; knew the doctors and saw them when they took out the stomach.

Dr. Fink, the next witness, a practicing physician and druggist of Conticing physician and druggist of Conticing physician and druggist of Concord, recognized the prisoner and saw him last in his office. He was there twice, first in the latter part of December and again on the 5th of January. He applied to him for medicine for himself and wife, and also wanted strychnine. The prisoner said, as well as witness could recollect, that he wanted the strychnine to kill rats. He refused to give it to him and told him that he had better use something else.

John York, colored, lives in Iredell, and saw the prisoner first and last at

The S. V. M's, amateur minstrels, will certainly appear on the night of the fore his wife's death. The witness asked him about Mr. Blackwelder's health. In the course of the conversation there has been no lack of practice. If they are as successful as they anticipate, they will visit and give exhibitions in several neighboring towns.

The moon and Jupiter were in conjunction Friday, and yesterday Jupiter was in opposition with the sun. Jupe is now at his most brilliant point, being the fore he could get strychnine and warned it to kill rats—that they would run him out. Witness didn't know where he could get strychnine and warned him against it.

On the cross examination by Mr. of m Bailey, witness said he did say on the preliminary trial that he did not know Pethel. No one told him who Pethel was at Mooresville. He never sold strychnine to strangers and didn't let Pethel have any.

Bingham Foil, a young man, had been a schoolmate of Alice Pethel, when she was Alice Partee, and went over to her house on the evening of the 5th of February, 1878. He staid about an hour and a half. Lundy Fethel, George's is ter, was there. Alice was complaining of a pain in her head—across the forehead. He and Lundy went out into the yard, and afterwards Alice came to the door and took a dose of medicine from a spoon; it was a powder, not as white as quinine, and when she took it she frowned like it was bitter. He left shortly afterwards, and when he returned in an hour or two Alice was dead. About two weeks later, he saw them take her body up and described them take her body up and described the removal of the stomach by the doc-tors; also saw Coroner Fraley there. The seventh witness was a little girl Mollie Blackwelder, a daughter of Mr. John Blackwelder. She said she went over to Alice Pethel's house before sundown. Her little brother George was there. She said she saw Alice dying, and then described to the jury how she died, imitating her motions, the posi-tions of her hands, &c. Alice was lying across the bed and in her movements fell off on the floor, grabbing the quilt as she fell. Witness and his brother went out and called George Pethel, who ran into the house. George and Lundy put her back on the bed.

On the cross examination by Mr.
Bailey, she said she got there about five minutes before Lundy came back from the spring. Lundy told her little brother to hand her a cup of water, and she threw it on Alice's face. Witness was on the outside of the house when she saw George come running. Lundy did not try to put Alice on the bed till George came. her back on the bed. George came.

hundred yards distant. He heard his children calling George on the evening of Alice's death. George was at his house on the porch, washing his hands. Witness's wife told George he had better go over home as something must be the matter. He replied it was only some of Alice's damir foolishness. Witness remembered to have sent Pethel when the court open noon, the solicitor stated what he proposed to prove. It was, briefly, that on or about the 1st of February, 1878, the prisoner caused the death of his wife by administering strychnine, as medicine.

The first witness was N. D. Fetzer, a The first witness was N. D. Fetzer, a He was asked if the didn't go to George's house that evening, as he was sick. it. Witness then asked him why he threw it in the fire, and his reply was that he didn't want any one to see it. The prisoner, who was orking for him, got a leave of absence for two weeks until "this would wear off his mind." The witness remarks to have overheard the war determined to try it again. The Cuirassiers had their second drill on the fair grounds yesterday, and are gratified at their success. Many of the members belonged to the cavalry dur-ing the late war and are surprised to find how little of the tactics have been find how little of the tactics have been forgotten. The company now numbers forty-five, having had nine additions since the last meeting. Next Saturday they will hold a business meeting at the court house for the purpose of deciding upon a uniform. As soon as these are procured, there will be a public drill on the streets.

A Platinum Mine for $20,000.

Some time ago, the fact that Edison, the inventor, had written to several gentlemen in this immediate section of the country, making inquiry as to the existence of platinum in the mines hereabouts. was mentioned in THE OBSERVER. It is now learned that Prof. W. E. Hidden, of Menlo Park, N. J., is in Henderson county, in consultation with Gen. Clingman and others in referwith Gen. Clingman and others in referwith Gen. Clingman and others in reference to this subject, having been sent out by Mr. Edison himself. He desires a very large quantity of this metal for use in his recently patented electric light, and it is said will pay $20,000 for a good mine of platinum. Our information is that Prof. Hidden is satisfied that to this section of North Carolina has must look for the the metal now so he must look for the the metal now so much in demand. Miners would therefore do well to keep a sharp look out for it. It is frequently found associated with gold in varying quantities.

Something New Under the Sun.

A new era is drawing upon the life of woman. Hitherto she has been called upon to suffer the ills of mankind and her own besides. The frequent and distressing irregularities peculiar to her sex have long been to her the "directal apring of woes unnumbered." In the mansion of the side, and in the hovel of poverty affike, woman has been the constant, yet patient victim of a thousand fils unknown to man—and these without a redemy. "Oh Lord, liow long," in the agony of her sout bath side cried. But now the hour of her redemption is come. She will suffer no more, for Dr. J. Bradneld's Female Begulator—woman's Best Friendmay be relied on to ture all the diseases peculiar to women. Try fe and be convinced.

Regarding the Bowman case, which was reported at tempth in the columns yesterday, one of the most important links in the chain of wridence that bound the wife murdered was forgotten in the baste of writing. It was proved on the trial that Mrs. Bowman had said more than once to a neighbor that if her husband ever poisoned her she would put a mark on him, by a bite or otherwise, that would mug him. It was further in evidence the on the day she died, a neighbor at the huses asked Bowman what had been her appointed. He described these and said sanger other things that just before her dead, and while struggling in the agonies of dissolution, she had caught him around the neck, held him fast and tried to bite him in the face. The prosecution made good use of this point.

A Burke County Camp-Meeting.

at Mt. Pleasant camp ground in Burke

The meeting was a grand successheld four days, four services each day which made the time seem almost equal to twice the time it held. During the time fifty persons professed faith in Christ, and forty-two joined the Methodist church. There was no rowdyism dist church. There was no rowdyism like I have seen at some camp-meetings, such as throwing rocks at the arbor. No policemen were necessary to keep order. The people seem to be well trained in that community, demonstrating the fact that "train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." If we take care of the boys the men will take care of themselves. A bad boy will almost be sure to make a bad man. Parents ought to think of this and control them when young. I never saw or trol them when young. I never saw or met with a better people, nor warmer hearts. I returned home on Friday and will be at my church on Sabbath. J. F. BUTT.
