"The Swelling Sea."

The birds of the North flew onward,
The lichen its odors shed;
The crescent moon was pale
As a water lily—dead—
Torn from its parent stem and floating For weeks on its watery bed. The Northern light burned brightly—
The circle was broad and low;
The rays were like whirling pillars of fire
With green and crimson glow.

The dying man lay in his hut—
"Oh, where shall we bury thee?
Shall we bury thee on the mountain,
Or under the swelling sea? Shall we bury thee on the mountain
In the eternal snow;
Where the spirits of the mists shall dance
While thou liest still below?

[From the Danish.]

Or wilt thou be sunk in the sea-The blue and swelling sea?
The birds of the tempest shall whirl above,
And the seals play merrily.'
He mountfully smiled and whispered low:
"In the sea, the swelling sea."

A man with a $600 diamond on his shirt bosom leaned over a hen coop in a Cincinnati market and a hungry hen picked off the jewel and swallowed it. The thief was soon lost among the hundreds, and there was no way of identifying her. So the man bargained to have them killed, one after another, until the right crop was found. To recover the diamond cost him $28.

A Congregational church in a rural Ohio neighborhood gets along very well without a minister. A young man, possessed of fine elocutionary skill, reads a report of some eminent clergyman's sermon every Sunday, and the rest of the pastoral work is done by deacons. The same plan has been adopted in several other Western places, but not with so much success, for the Ohio reader has the ability to deliver the borrowed the fervor of an original effort.

"What has become of the Republicans? They are not all killed off, are they?"

"There are enough of them, same as there are in Mississippi and south Carolina, to carry the elections, if they weren't cheated in the count. There isn't much actual bull-dozing in North Carolina, but there is some. I don't Carolina, but there is some. I don't know of any white Republicans who have gone over to the Democrats, and as for the negroes, they are with us almost to a man."

Irish and other foreigners; but Americans, and Northerners especially, are not clannish. They have too much individuality, and they lack the communistic or social elements which alone can make colonization successful anywhere. The trouble with the Yankee who goes South is that he knows too much. He is too stubborn and opinionative. You can't tell him anything. What he don't know about farming isn't worth knowing. He will spend $30 on an acre of land not worth $5 after he gets through with it. He un-dertakes to apply Northern methods and he fails."
