My Love Loves Me.

This is the bright hour of a magic time. The evening close of a Summer dream...

So I cheerily turn me to work again. Life runs its steady round once more...

OBSERVATIONS.

A Texas paper has discovered that the world is a big revolver.

The Corlies engine, of centennial fame, now runs the machinery of the branch mill at San Francisco.

There are not enough Cabinet officers left in Washington to make up a three-handed game of euchre.

When our third edition came tripping down stairs this morning she regularly exclaimed: "Here I am ready for the press!"

A gentleman was in the city last week trying to introduce paper shirts. We don't know, but it seems to him that a shirt made out of a story paper would have no many tates.

Albany Journal: "Do you keep any Hamburg edging?" asked a timid miss. "Not if we can sell it," was the pert reply of the clerk. He kept some that day.

"John," said a Philadelphia father to his boy, who was about to be married, "shall I buy you a 'sheep' suit?" "Oh, father," returned the young bridegroom, "ain't you ashamed? She ain't that kind of a girl."—B. Conking.

Two statesmen were engaged in the comparative lanouset occupation of talking the other day when one of them said, "It won't do to move the previous question here, James." "Why not?" inquired James. "Because you see if the motion was carried it would cut off all debate."

The London Spectator thinks that women care more for nature and men more for art. A cynical sacheer might say that the reason why men and women care so much for each other.

The Boston Post knows of a "man, a victim to tobacco, who hasn't tasted food for forty years." As for that, we know of a man, a victim to tobacco, who hasn't tasted food for forty-seven years. The tobacco killed him in 1832.

Harpers Bazar, on table manners, says: "Do not betray by any gesture that you are hungry. Certainly not by the way of coming to the table to satisfy his appetite: it is a mere form. Any indication that you go there because you want something to eat is very ill-bred."

The two fool, Captain Goldsmith and wife, who started for Europe in a month ago, were picked up August 21st nearly dead by a British ship which reached Liverpool last week. The woman was sick from the time she started, and between taking care of her and looking out for the boat, in a succession of storms, the ambitious captain had all the salt water experience in a little boat that he cares to have.

Tilden and Kelly.

Augusta Chronicle and Constitutionalist. Upon the Democratic faithful at Washington the Tammany bolt and nomination fell with crushing force.

The Republicans are jubilant, and the Post tells us that most of them were quoting with great glee Grant's saying, to the effect that the Republican party, commit what blunders they may, can always depend upon the Democracy to correct and amend their errors.

From the same source we learn that indignation against marplot Kelly knew no bounds among politicians, and almost a pebble ensued. He was in ways in the city, and he was in the "crash of worlds," a redeeming feature peeped out, and so, among the infuriated crowd, up rose a sturdy old Democrat, who, with the fluency of a veteran campaigner, demonstrated that there was nothing to be scared at after all.

Like Bob Acres, under the supervision of Sir Lucius O'Trigger, he insisted upon "beginning with a damn." This we kindly and reverently omit. We also suppress an illustration of John Kelly that would do better in a back alley than in a well regulated community. We admire its force and applicability, but denounce its coarseness.

The real substance of the veteran's discourse is well worth printing, and here it is: "John Kelly may blow and bluff as much as he pleases, but he can accomplish nothing by a bolt but the annihilation of the influence of Tammany Hall. Tilden will organize all round him in New York (the city I mean), and he will find that he cannot control the votes that made him. He who kicks against the Democratic organization and its primaries in New York will be politically damned; and John Kelly, when this fight is over, will be the most conspicuous illustration. You see, the rule of Tammany has been a sort of aristocracy, and many who have obeyed the behests of the Boss have done so under the fear of political domination. They have seen Kelly & Co. take all the honors and profits, while they have had nothing but smiles of the sacheer to reward them for their labors. They hate the power they serve. And now that they have the excuse to shake loose the shackles of Kelly & Co. and join the army of the general who has never been conquered—Samuel J. Tilden—they will gladly have done so on opportunity. These people see the handwriting on the wall, and that reads: "New York Democratic, Tilden President; New York Republican, a Republican President." They have received nothing from Tammany. They receive much from Tilden, and the very fact that the Tammany leaders are out of the game will give their former subordinates who desert and go to Tilden a better chance for power and plunder when Tilden is elected President. At all events, they have nothing to gain by following Kelly, and everything to hope for by following Tilden. Rebelling against Tammany, they rebel against rebels against their labor. Tilden will organize all round Tammany, and if Tammany persists in its rebellion, there will soon be nothing left of Tammany but John Kelly and a few of his satellites. It will cease to exist as a political power, and Tilden, and the men who support him will increase the voting power in the Democratic party in New York."

"But who will carry the State?" "Yes, Robinson will be elected. Kelly will receive 10,000 votes, and New York will send a solid delegation to the national convention for Tilden for President. The South will come in nearly solid for Kelly, and he will be nominated and I believe elected."

"I don't know. He has backed down several times before, and may this time. I rather think he will, but it makes but little difference whether he does or not. Robinson will be elected anyway."

CHAW JACKSONS, BEST SWEET HAY TOBACCO.

MAJOR NEWS ITEMS.

It has been definitely settled that the race for the Astley bell shall commence at Madison Square Garden, September 22.

A boy about 8 years old, was run over by a wagon in Lynchburg, Va., Saturday evening, and killed, the body being badly mangled.

The chairman of the Democratic national committee has issued a call for a meeting of that committee in Washington, September 18.

Judge Settle, of Florida, in an interview, says that he feels sure that Florida will cast her vote for the next Republican nominee for the presidency, this year, and that he is looked upon as a certainty of a solid South.

Richmond City will have a youthful delegation in the next House of Delegates. Capt. Chamberlain, the eldest of the Conservative nominees, is not forty years of age, whilst Mr. Lyons, the youngest, is only twenty-three.

It is announced that the Mammoth Cave, Ky., has been purchased by a company of Eastern capitalists for a $200,000. The interior will be illuminated with electric lights, and telegraph will be introduced in the cave.

The first train on the railroad from Norfolk to Ocean View, Va., was run through Saturday afternoon, and carried quite a number of passengers, including officers and stockholders. The road will be thrown open to public travel this week.

The anniversary of the overthrow of the Kellogg government on September 14th, 1874, was observed in New Orleans Sunday. Military companies paraded through the streets, and a reception for the members of the militia killed on that occasion was celebrated at the Cathedral.

The Messrs. Reynolds, cotton merchants, of Norfolk, Va., have arranged to put in operation a line of steamers between that port and Liverpool. The steamers are the Amazonque, Prosper, Samatra, Alva, Almore, Catherstone and Ashbourne, having an aggregate tonnage of 13,567 tons. They will sail at intervals of 10 days.

Extensive preparations are being made at San Francisco for the reception of Gen. Grant. The steamer City of Tokio, on which he is to arrive, will be met by a yacht squadron and steamers, with the reception committee and distinguished citizens. About five hundred veterans met Saturday night and resolved to welcome the General with a national salute from the Sand Lots.

The League Club, of Philadelphia, have sent a dispatch to San Francisco for General Grant, tendering him a reception on his arrival in Philadelphia. The City of Tokio may not arrive until next Sunday, though she may possibly put in an appearance as early as Wednesday.

SOUTH CAROLINA ITEMS.

The caterpillar is glaying havoc with the Sea Island cotton.

Maj. A. Burnett Rhett, of Charleston, a greatly esteemed gentleman, died last Saturday at Flat Rock, N. C.

Gen. W. L. T. Prince, of Chesterfield, is the choice of a great many persons for solicitor of the fourth circuit.

Chester News.—We learn from an authentic source that the denizens of Fisher Hill and the Kin Brand near Chester, raw, held a meeting last Saturday night and Sunday, and adopted resolutions binding themselves, their wives and children not to pick cotton for less than fifty cents per hundred pounds, under penalty of a whipping, a member of the organization to apply the lash.

Union Times: Official information was received here on Wednesday morning that the notorious Bob Sartor, for whom there was a bench warrant issued at the March term of court for 1878 for murdering his wife, had been captured and is in jail at Charlotte, N. C. The proper papers have been issued to bring him to this State, and it is expected he will be here in time for trial at the October court.

Ricketty George, a deformed negro of Lexington, attending to the care of a hornet's nest the other day by stopping up the hole with a piece of paper. In his haste he missed the door and gave the nest a severe jar, which aroused the inmates, and in less than no time George was covered by the fery-tailed insects. At the first pass he was knocked flat, and was in a fair way of being stung to death when some white men came to his rescue and bore him off the field.

Charleston News and Courier: Two citizens were conversing in an animated manner in Broad street yesterday, one of them holding a revolver; six other citizens sought shelter behind neighboring tree boxes and posts, three rushed to the gunhouse and summoned four policemen, and seven others stood to watch the shooting at a safe distance. Two reporters hurried to the scene, having scented a four-column item from afar, and produced their note books. Then it transpired that the one citizen was trying to sell the revolver to the other, and the debate was over the price.

FABLES—THIRD SERIES.

IX.—The Renomiated Sheep-Dog and the Black Sheep.

New York World.

A Black Sheep, observing that the Shepherd was about to renominate to the care of the Flock the Sheep-dog who had long been its faithful Guardian, protested vehemently against this Action. "I care not what other Dog you may select," said the Sheep, "but if you renominate him I will stay out of the fold and form a Coalition with the other Sheep, and seven others stood to Heed to these Threats, the Black Sheep set off toward a precipitous Mountain bleating aloud at every Step that he would never return to the Fold. "Will you please that Dog be bleated after he had scrambled up the first Acclivity; "You want? Well, I will see the Chamois and go him one higher." Again when he had reached the Region of Eternal Snows, the Sheep repeated his Threat, but no Notice was taken of it. Maddened with Rage he scaled a Mountain-Summit 22,000 Feet high, and was about to rest a Balloon, when he observed the hire of the Flock proceeding to the Fold under the guardianship of the Renomiated Sheep-dog. Bounding down the Mountain-side he hastened across the Plain, and rejoined his Companions. "I had hoped we had lost you," said the Shepherd, coldly, and the other Sheep said to the Returned Flock-leader, "Do you know what we thought when we saw you boling up the Hill?" "No," he replied; "did you think I was never going to come back?" "Ah, no," answered his Fellows, "because we knew that you had been bleated after the Fact that the further you went the smaller you seemed to get."

A revival is in progress in the Baptist church of Durham.
