The Same Cantata.

There are bonds of all sorts in this world of ours. Fetters of friendship and ties of flowers.

It was sometimes water and sometimes milk. And sometimes apple-jack, fine as silk.

But whenever the tittle has been shared it together, home or bliss, And I want to you, friend, when I think of this— We have drunk from the same cantata!

The rich and the great sit down to dine. And they quaff to each other in sparkling wine.

From glasses of crystal and of glass. But I guess in their golden positions they miss The warmth of regard to be found in the same cantata!

We have shared our blankets and tent together. And have marched and fought in all kinds of weather.

And hungry and full we have been; Had days of battle and days of rest. But this memory I cling to and love the best— We have drunk from the same cantata!

For when wounded I lay on the outer slope. With my blood flowing fast and but little hope Upon which to rely, and my eyes dim with pain. Oh, then I remember you crawled to my side. And bleeding so fast it seemed both must have died.

We drank from the same cantata!

OBSERVATIONS.

The difference between a woman and an umbrella is that the latter can be shut up.

It gives us great pleasure to announce that, thus far, the season's peach-crop is safe.—Middleton Transcript.

"All the mills are now running full time," says a New England paper. Particularly the outrage which manufactures machinery and mill-stones, and the Tammany boiling mill, now run by the same owners.

New York Commercial Advertiser: There is to be a lawsuit over "Baby Mine" in which the author sued Dison & Co. for $20,000. There was a similar suit, will be remembered, in the time of Solomon, in which our readers are of course acquainted with the Old Testament.

"What brought Grant home?" mysteriously demands a Missouri newspaper. "He didn't follow the game, but he might have got in on a hard hit to centre field, or a hot liner to third, badly muffed, or a safe to first base, or a home run, or a single to get home when you are on third and have a lively hitter at the bat.

Can it be possible my Algeon no longer loves his little brown eyes? Can it be that her eyes have become iridescent to him at last?" said a heart-broken young publisher, who, in the company of the other guests, as the latter seemed inclined to remove her clinging form from his breast, "your Algeon is all right" with the youth, with an uneasy squint, "but if you don't let up a minute, Madam, the spiral of my stud will come out through my neck and ears."

Kentucky isn't dead yet. No sir—e. A couple of African persuaders were getting married at Kinton the other night. The bride and groom, and two colored women who "wanted dat man 'emselves," attacked the bride and tried to tear off her trousseau. Somehow the groom objected to this proceeding, and the twisted rivals of the bride were locked out of the building.

Two girls belonging to a church choir in Los Angeles, California, got locked in the church the other night while they were talking over the phone. They gave the alarm, when a man living near the church put a board up the window and they slid down to the ground. The man, who was that after they had got safely to the ground they looked mad and went off without thanking the man, and they went to him when they met him. He couldn't account for it until he went to take the board down, when he got slivers in his fingers and scratched his thumb on shingle nail that stuck through the board.

TERRIBLE BOILER EXPLOSION.

Three Men Killed and Two Wounded. Correspondence of the Raleigh Observer.

HENDERSON, Oct. 4, 1879.—A terrific boiler explosion occurred at Church's store, about five miles below Henderson, near the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad, on the morning just before sunrise, killing three men outright and wounding two others seriously, though not fatally.

The cotton gin just across the road from Mr. C. B. Church's was owned and run by Mr. Church and Mr. L. Boyd White, who located the gin and engine two or three years since.

"They have been engaged regularly in running for the community, and last evening the engineer, Mr. Harris, instructed the fireman to fire up early this morning and get on the usual head of steam by the time he got there, his home being some distance away. According to instructions the fireman got up steam, and the engineer not coming to hand, he concluded to commence firing, and had probably fired nearly a bale of cotton when the pump got out of order. Meanwhile, under a heavy firing the boiler became quite hot with a small supply of water on. The pump was repaired and a volume of cold water being turned in, a terrific explosion occurred, which was heard for miles around.

Douglas Alexander, fireman, was blown backward about one hundred feet, over the fence into the cotton patch, most of his clothes being stripped off and his skin mashed in.

Alfred Carroll, who was working on the pump, was thrown through the air, the distance of a hundred yards, up in the woods, some of his clothes lodging in the topmost bough of a pine. His body was literally torn in pieces, fragments scattered here and there through the bushes.

The boiler was driven through the gin-house, missing the press about two feet, and cutting down the upright posts supporting the upper floors, and the seed cotton precipitated from the bins to the ground floor below; passing on it tore through the front of the door.

The next victim of the mad destruction was Ben Hughes, a customer, who was unloading seed cotton from his wagon in front of the gin. A piece of the flying timber carried away the upper part of his skull and cut his back frightfully. His wagon was completely demolished by the boiler, which struck a bale of cotton, tearing away the entire end; then it hit in the earth and finally stopped at the side of the house across the road, seventy-five feet away. A man standing between the shafts of Ben Hughes's wagon was not hurt. The man at the gin upstairs also escaped unhurt, but two hands working at the press were wounded by pieces of timber; one having his teeth knocked in and receiving some injury in the back. The two last named, Louis Ward and Daniel Roberts, were colored men, as were all the others. There was not a white man about the building. All parts of the engine and shed are a perfect wreck, some of the pieces flying two or three hundred yards away. Hundreds of people visiting the scene of disaster, turn away horrified at the sickening sight of the mangled bodies.

Funerary's Inauguration.

The New York Supreme Court, in its extraordinary session of the General Term, Friday concluded unanimously (without, however, a formal decision or the issuance of any writ) that it is the duty of the police board to appoint Democratic inspectors from the body of the Democratic party in its entirety, and without regard to factions.

The court further concluded that, having duly recognized the minority (the Republicans) and appointed a third inspector in each district from the wing of the party known as the Irving Hall Democracy, it is now their duty to appoint the fourth inspector from the Tammany Hall organization.

Do not, if a gentleman, leave the hat in the hall when making a formal call. If the call is extended into a visit, it may then be laid aside. Whether sitting or standing, the hat may be gracefully held in the hand.

STATE NEWS.

Skating rink running in Raleigh. The health of the convicts in the penitentiary is reported as excellent.

The Second Presbyterian church, of Raleigh, is rapidly approaching completion.

Mr. W. A. Tuttle, an esteemed and reliable citizen of Caldwell county, died last week, aged 38.

Rev. Dr. Burkhead, of the North Carolina Conference, lost his little four-year-old daughter last Friday.

The new fire company in Wilmington is named the Steadman Fire Company, in honor of Major Charles Steadman.

Dr. S. J. Wheeler, a brother of Col. John H. Wheeler, the historian, died on the 19th ult., at Windsor, Bertie county.

The Wilmington Star learns that the rice crop in that section is very fine, and that the acreage will probably be doubled next year.

The Raleigh Observer will, on and after the 1st of November, issue a semi-weekly in addition to its daily and weekly editions.

Wilmington Star: It is stated that the skull of the colored man who jumped from the excursion train at Nichols, S. C., the other day, was smashed like an egg shell; but that a bottle he had in his pocket was intact.

Recently the remains of a Mrs. Toole, who was buried some time ago near Louisburg, Franklin county, were exhumed and were found to have petrified. A Raleigh News correspondent says the nose and one finger broke off.

It is reported in Wilmington that Tom Johnson, colored, a notorious outlaw who to the editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, who recently spoke in very disparaging terms of the college. Col. Capers writes well.

Col. H. D. Capers, lawyer and professor in Rutherford College, writes a very sensible letter published in the Morganton Blade to the editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, who recently spoke in very disparaging terms of the college. Col. Capers writes well.

The colored people of Wilson held a meeting last week and appointed two respectable colored men, one from the town and the other from the country, to visit Knappa and spy out the land. This is the Mosaic plan and the best thing that could have been adopted by those contemplating an exodus. The two men will leave the latter part of the month.

Lincolnton Progress: Last Tuesday night "Capt." John Connor, colored, was shot twice by his step-son Ervin. One ball took effect in the thigh and the other hit a piece out of one of his little fingers. The wounds are only slight, and the captain will soon be out again. After the difficulty Ervin decamped and has not been heard from since.

Messrs. Williams & Murchison, of Wilmington, and the cotton compress company of which Mr. D. H. Murchison is president, presented the fire department of Wilmington with a check for $300 for its efforts in the late fire by which the compress and a lot of cotton were destroyed—a very handsome recognition of the services of a class of men whose work is too often not appreciated.

The Morganton Blade learns that the fish hatchery is now ready for the reception of the installment of salmon eggs which are expected to arrive by express from McCloud river. The capacity of this hatchery is seven hundred and twenty thousand salmon eggs with water capacity and honesty for much more extended work if necessary. The conveying water pipe leading down to the hatchery from the asylum was put in last week and there is nothing now to interrupt the commencement of the season of slow winter hatching which is peculiar to the family of salmonidae. In a short time the mountain trout will be brought down from the former hatchery at Henry's.
