What Mr. Helper's Novel is To Do.

Mr. Helton Rowan Helper is a North Carolinian who made himself somewhat notorious by his anti-slavery book before the war, and by his "No. 40" book after the war. He is now on his way to build a double-track steel railway from a point high up in North America to a point low down in South America. THE LETTERS TO GRANT.

What Southerners Had to Say to the "American King."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Your telegram of November 8, to me at Atlanta, Ga., has just been received. It is the first I can remember of your kind on the occasion of General Grant's reception there, referred to in your telegram. You would certainly pay my respects to him in person, and I have his kind regards to him. It is a pity that you are not here, as you are, irrespective of party, a hearty congratulation on his safe return from his extensive travels, and for the high honors he has received.

At this stage he is not prepared to account for the failure of his prediction.
