LIVER PILLS

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach, is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sen-sation in the back part. There is gen-erally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. summon up fortitude enough to try it. TUTOR LINCK'S LAWSUIT.

Mrs. Kate Chase-Sprague's Alleged Contract with the Professor.

About a month ago Prof. Geo. Linck sued Mrs. Kate C. Sprague for $240, which he claimed was due for services as private tutor to her son Willie, and for moneys expended by him (Prof. Linck) for her (Mrs. Sprague) and for her fami-ly last summer. Through her attorney, Mr. L. H. Arnold, Jr., Mrs. Sprague put in an answer, refusing to pay the demand of Prof. Linck, on the ground that she was a married woman, the wife of William Sprague, who, as her husband, was responsible for the payment of any money due the professor.

To this answer the professor's lawyer, Mr. D. Maclean Shaw, made no reply, but pushed the suit, and, consequently, the defendant summoned the plaintiff before Judge Sinnot, in the Marine Court, chambers, yesterday, on a motion to compel the plaintiff to disclose how he expected to evade the bar set up in the answer of the defendent. "Mrs. Sprague says," said the lawyer, "that the contract with Prof. Linck was made with the full knowledge and consent of her husband. This is well known according to her own published statements to be false. For it is a matter of public notoriety that the contract was not made with Gov. Sprague's knowledge and consent. Mrs. Sprague had not lived with him in its matter. lived with him in six months, and when the professor entered upon his duties at Canonchet he hastily retreated out of the back door at the muzzle of a loaded shot gun in the hands of Gov. Sprague. Furthermore, according to the defendant's own statements she did not live with her husband, and he did nothing toward providing for her support or the support and education of her children.' Then Mr. Shaw read extracts from letters written by Mrs. Sprague to Prof Linck, and already published.

"Prof. Linck has spent $100 on Mrs. Sprague and her children," said Mr. Shaw, "and he cant't get it back. She has allowed him to spend money freely for her in travelling expenses, expressage, and for clothing for her children: and now, when he wants it back, she sets up as a reason why she should not pay it that she is a married woman. The plaintiff, he said, was a gentleman in every sense of the word, a man of refinement and culture, the master of six or seven languages, an artist and a musician, a man who would adorn by husician, a man who would adorn by his presence either a cottage or a palace. Mrs. Sprague knew all this. She knew that he was the missing link, a fit man to instruct her children and a fit companion for herself. To this eulogy Prof. Linck, a tall, studious-looking man, with a baid head, full brown beard, and gold spragges husehed glightly and cast his spectacles, blushed slightly and cast his blue eyes downward.

"As for Mrs. Sprague," the lawyer went on, "she was the daughter of an ex-Chief Justice of the United States, the wife of an ex-Governor of the State of Rhode Island, and—"

"And a very estimable lady," inter-rupted Judge Sinnott.

"And the intimate friend of New York's big Senator," continued Mr. Shaw, "who so unceremoniously quitted Rhode Island not long ago. She travels with a retinue of servants and a cara-van of baggage, and entertains foreign noblemen at her residence, but she re-

BYNUM AND BUXTON.

Their Alleged Utterances Regarding State and National Politics. Asheville Journal, 26th.

At Polk county court, last week, we had an interview with Judges Bynum and Buxton. Judge Bynum spoke as

"North Carolina can be carried by hevond doubt, i. e., if General Grant should head the national ticket." Said he: "The very name of General Grant enlivens business. Men who are Democrats, in my town, and who are property holders and men of money, desire Grant. They say that they want a strong and substantial government, and when they have General Grant at its head they are assured of that fact. The Democrats in North Carolina have done more to strengthen the Republican party than the Republicans have done for themselves. The acts of the recent Legislature, if properly made known to the people of North Carolina, will damn forever the party that did the law making."

We asked the judge if he would con-sent to have his name placed at the head of the Republican ticket in North Carolina. He rather turned himself around in his seat and said: "I have not thought about it—think that there are other good men that could carry the State, and leave me to attend to my profession, which keeps me very busy."

Judge Buxton said that he regarded the Republican party stronger in North Carolina to day than it was in 1868. "I have no doubt said he, "but that North Carolina can and will go largely Republican in 1880; that the Democrate have been so land in their in full blast before the sleepers awoke. Nothing was rescued, except, perhaps, the servants took out their bed. Loss about $5,000. No insurance.

The Roanoke News gives an account of the burning of an old negro named H. J. Pope, who was an hundred years old: He had a quantity of hay in his cabin on which he usually slept. During the night it is supposed this hay caught fire and burned the cabin and the old man to ashes. Next morning only a heap of ashes and cinders were and with a national Republican administration, and North Carolina a Republican in 1880; that the Demccarts have been so loud in their promises to reform in every branch of the government, and have fallen short in almost every particular, that the people desire and will have a change. We asked, "Well, judge, who do you think we had better have at the head of
