accompanied with a dull, heavy sen-sation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he com-

POLIPICAL TALK

NAMESTANG REMINISCENCES OF

Mr. Tilden's Position in the Past and Plans for the Future—Speculations Visite the Democratic Presidential Nomination, &c.

special to the Balkmure Sun! 116 /17

THE ELECTORAL COUNT CAMPAIGN Washington, January 12.—Something of interest may be added to the items of political gossip, which have lately been printed respecting Mr. Tuden's connection with the electoral commission, his present plans and prospects, and the probable menimes of the next national Democratic convention. It may be noted that of all the many statements purporting to ema-nate from Mr. Tilden on these subjects, none of them have the mark of his sig-nature, and they therefore may be re-pudiated by him at any time. First, as to the recent interview of Gen. Steadman of Ohio, with Mr. Tilden: Gen. Steadman represents Mr. Tilden as saying that he knew nothing about the preparation or intended adoption of the electoral bill until Mr. Hewitt informed him that it had been agreed upon, and that Senators Bayard and Thurman would not consult any one outside. of their sphere. As the contrary of this statement can be established by the concurrent testimony of numbers upon numbers of the most prominent Democrats, Gen. Steadman must certainly have misunderstood Mr. Tilden. As to the statement that Senators Bayard and Thurman would not consult Mr. Tilden, a bit of history may now for the first time be given: In the early part of December, 1876, Speaker Bayard and said Mr. Tilden was very anxious to see them both and consult what was best to be done in the then critical condition of affairs. As the result of this, Mr. Bavard, two or three days before Christmas, went to New York. Senator Thurman would have accompanied him, but was unable to do bill was concerned it would be a strain on credulity to imagine that Mr. Tilden did not know of the bill until after it was adopted, or that he exhibited to his friends any opposition to it, no matter what his private opinion may have been. When the committees of the senate and the House were formed to devise a scheme for the satisfactory set thement of the presidential election it was agreed that the two committees should meet separately, and each may be satisfactory and each may be some for Governor. should meet separately, and each mature a plan, if possible, to be presented for the consideration of the committees in joint meeting. It will be remembered that nothing came of this, and the plan which was subsequently determined upon was only reached after long and anxious deliberation by the two committees in joint session. Mr. Hewitt was at that time the glose personal friend of Mr. Tilden; he had been made chairman of the national Demcratic committee as Mr. Tilden's mouthpiece; he was in daily intercourse with Mr. Tilden, and it was understood everywhere by every one that Mr. Hewitt represented Mr. Tilden in all that was done | Mr. Hewitt was a member of the joint committee which framed the electoral bill. He participated in all its deliberations, and he gave his approval to the measure which was agreed upon. Mr. David Dudley Field, who had that winter been elected to Con-is nominated who is acceptable to him. He says that his firm conviction is that Mr. Tilden does not desire the nomination for himself, but that he would like to be in a position there he can decline the nomination gracefully. There has been much talk of Mr. Tilden's influence being exerted in behalf of Speaker Handall, but there is good authority for the statement that there is nothing in this beyond the suggestions of some of the personal friends of Mr. Randall. Who Mr. Tilden would really prefer has not yet been fully developed, but the indications point to Gen. McClellan. It seems to be considered here and in New York that Mr. Tilden is inimical to Mr. Bayard for some reason of other. Many, however, of the most prominent and influential Democrats of New York are warmly in favor of prominent and influential Democrates of New York are warmly in favor of Mr. Bayard, and August Belmont is credited with the assertion that Mr. Bayard can carry New York by 50,000 majority. The more sagacious of the Democratic leaders here have been in the last few days in consultation as to the next Presidency, and the opinion arrived at by them is that if Horatio Seymour will take the nomination he will certainly get it, but that if he positively declines, all the probabilities point to the nomination of Mr. Bayard, There appears to be no doubt here that There appears to be no doubt here that it may be relied upon that there will be no split in the New York Democracy

The Democrats generally exhibit great confidence in their ability to elect the next President, and on this presumption it is argued that none of the who go out in 1880 should be lost to the councils of the party and the nation. It has already been suggested, and re-celved with much favor, that Judge Thurman should be a candidate for the House of Representatives from his district, and his friends urge that he should sink whatever personal objections he may have in the matter. Yesterday and to-day the hope has been freely expressed that Gov. Whyte would stand for the House of Representatives from the congressional district in which he lives. So with regard to Senators Kernan, of New York, and Wallace, of Pennsylvania, whose services in the Senate are likely to be lost to their party. With men of such ex-perience in the House the Democratic party in that body might be saved from Randall went to Senators Thurman and a renewal of many of the mistakes come mitted in the last five years. PERSONAL The Kentucky Senate has decided by a large majority against a bill propos ing to admit women to the bar. so on account of sickness. Mr. Bayard saw Mr. Tilden, first at the house of a mutual friend, and afterwards at Mr. Tilden's own house. Their discussion of the situation lasted for hours, and Mr. Bayard left Mr. Tilden's house after midnight. The next morning, in company with Senator Lamar, who had in the meantime arrived in New York; he again called on Mr. Tilden. The Mrs. Granthat the hart Mrs. Grant is quoted as having said that the happiest period of her life and the General's was when they lived in conversation was as before protracted for a long time. As the two Senators walked down the streets, after leaving Mr. Tilden, Bayard said: "Lamar, what do you extract from Mr. Tilden's conversation?" The reply was "Nothing." On their return to Washington Mr. Bayard communicated the particulars of his visit, with his own and Mr. Lamar's conclusions, to Judge Thurman and others of his political associates in the Senate. Mr. Bayard told his associates that through the whole of the conver-sation Mr. Tilden invariably concluded with the idea that in any event he could be elected by the House of Representatives. From the fact that the electoral votes were in the possession of the President of the Senate, that the Senate was Republican, and the counting of the vote could just as well take place in the Senate chamber, and that President Grant stood ready to back up the Senate in any action which it might choose to take, it was seen that the idea of an election by the House of Representatives now not practicable. So far as the electoral gress to fill a vacancy, was sent to the House as the special representative of Mr. Tilden. Mr. Field was in daily consultation also with prominent Demo-oratiof the two houses, and was cognizant of every step that was taken. Can any one believe that with the re-lations subsisting between Mr. Tilden and these two gentlemen, he did not know everything that they knew? Then when the bill came up for action in the the Senators who was on the commit-tee that framed the bill to feel assured that it met Mr. Tilden's apprehation, that before recording his vote he wesit to Mr. Field, who was then present in the Senate chamber, and asked him if it was all right? "The very thing to do," was Mr. Field's response. When the bill came up in the House of Representatives, the support given to it by Richmord State.

Mr. TILDEN'S WISHES AND PLANS.

In regard to Mr. Tilden's wishes and plans for the future, it may readily be accepted that he has communicated them in detail to no one. Yet information which has been received here, coming from several of his intimate friends in New York, may be considered as sufficiently, reliable to give some insight into them. In regard to the late State canvass in New York it is said that Mr. Tilden spent a very large sume of money for election expenses one of his friends putting the
