It is said that Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet, although seventy years of age, splits his own wood. Some day the axe will strike the clothes line and inflict a gash in his head, and then he will wish he had let his wife do her own work. The New York World gives this advice:

Push, brothers, push with care,
Push the 13 to the 15 square;
The 6 to the 7, and you've got it there;
The 10 to the 9, or you don't care where,
But the 15 and the 14 they will stick there,

FASTING IN LENT.

The Story of Its Observance as Told by the Markets. The Methodist takes quite a businesslike view of the matter of fasting during Lent, as indicated by the New York market. It says: "If any one will watch the markets a little during Lent, and remember that millions of

through the State of North Carolina.
This leaves 70 miles unprovided for, being that part of the road which will run through the State of North Carolina.

Gen. Hood informs us that steps are bepeople are pretending to fast for forty days, he will probably ask himself why these people consent to participate in this hypocrisy. There may be a very little fasting, but there is not enough to produce any impression on the general aggregate of food consumed. If less this part of the line will be more exflesh and more fish is eaten, what possible religious value can this change of diet have? If it is merely a farce, why people who stuffed themselves with meat in January are stuffing themselves with fish in February? Not less than a million of the fasters draw supplies from New York markets; any real fasting on so large a scale would appear in a sharp fall of prices."

Jet and Knoxville will have direct communication with Charleston and Augusta.

"Ouida," the Novelist. From a Paris Letter. I recently had a conversation with an American gentleman who has lately visited Florence, and who related to me the following facts relative to the nov-elist "Ouida:" "I saw that celebrated personage several times during my stay, and cannot say that I found her realize and cannot say that I found her realize in any respect the portrait that she drew of herself in Friendship.' As you may remember, she depicts Adelina Patti and herself as the only decent women in Florentine (as she calls it Roman) society. The recent revelations about Mme. Patti make the juxtaposition rather awkward, but for that of course she cares nothing. 'Ouida' is very, very plain, and is, I should say, somewhere on the shady side of 40. She wears her 'rippled amber hair' (vide her own novels) hanging down her back in a truly juvenile fashion; for the rest, her dress is no more remarkable for taste than that of English women in general. 'Friendship,' and her precedgeneral. 'Friendship,' and her preceding book 'In a Winter City,' have rendered society in Florence very shy of her, particularly as she was most severe upon those who had been most hospitable to her. The American set, for instance, who had shown her the greatest kindness, was the one she most violent. kindness, was the one she most violently attacked. The elegant, charming and most blameless lady whom she withered into seeming nothingness, and finally disappeared. Such a natural phenomenon, though rare, is within the tried to hold up to derision under the personality of Mrs. Henry V. Clams, only laughs when 'Friendship' is referred to and declares that she has never read the book. For any species of social ostracism 'Ouida,' however, cares but little. She has no fondness for society, and spends her time in writing and in riding or driving. Perhaps it is as well, as she has pretty well exhausted the series of types in Florentine society. It is astonishing how often one comes across 'Ouida's people,' as the originals of hor mercial people, as the originals of her merciless caricatures are called. In one point she has perfectly succeeded. She has written 'Lady Joan Challoner' clear out liking for a certain garlic soup, which has of society, and that lady now lives secluded at 'Flordelisa.' The real fact of the matter appears to be as follows: The original of 'Prince Ioris,' a very accomplished, though by no means hand-some, Italian nobleman, seeing the style and splendor wherein 'Ouida' lived, offered her his hand; or, at all events, commenced negotiations to that end. But finding that the lady's wealth was all derived from her writings, and that she spent her money as fast as she made it, he broke off the negotiations and gracefully retired. Hence this wrath. Hence 'Friendship.' And hence, too, probably another severe and spicy volume in the new work which is shortly to appear.

Florentine society is on tiptoe to see it, the universal query being, 'Whose turn next?' I am told that 1,200 copies of 'Friendship' were sold in Florentine within 24 hours of its first appearance in the Tauchnitz edition." Judge Fowle on the Railroad Sale,

The following correspondence explains itself: Hon. Daniel G. Fowle: Western North Carolina Railroad, on the terms proposed by Mr. Best in case none better should be offered.

selling the road upon the best terms the Legislature can obtain. In doing so, special care should be taken that the guarantees are sufficient to compel the completon of the Ducktown line, so that the fertile and magnificent country through which it will run may be made accessible to the world. Respectfully, yours,

MR. TILDEN TO BE A CANDIDATE.

A Conference at Which He Formally Announces His Determination to Seek Renomination.

The Washington Post of recent date contains the following editorial article:

"At a meeting of the prominent friends of Mr. Tilden, which was held in New York last Saturday, the declaration was made by that gentleman that he would without doubt be a candidate for the Democratic prominetion." didate for the Democratic nomination. During the last six months, reports have reached us from time to time, and from most authentic sources, that Mr. Tilden contemplated a voluntary but decided renunciation of such honors. But we have no reason to doubt that, whatever might have been his intentions and purposes, he is now firmly re-solved to ask for a renomination. It was due to his friends, who might desire to attach themselves to other can-didates in the event of his withdrawal, that he should come to an immediate and positive decision, and this, we are informed on unquestionable authority, he has done.

The Blue Ridge Route.

In a conversation to-day with Gen. R. N. Hood, president of the above road, he informed us that he had just received information from the principal stockholders of his road that they were ready at any time to complete it to the North Carolina line. He also has assurances from Col. G. J. Foreacre, of Georgia, that ample arrangements have that part of the road which will run through the State of North Carolina. Gen. Hood informs us that steps are being taken to secure the means for the completion of that link, and he is sanguine that the time is not far distant completion of a road from Knoxville to the Atlantic seaboard in a very few pretend to maintain it? It would certainly be useful that people who habitually eat too much should restore the balance by forty days of moderate eating. But what if the market fail obtained legislation in South Carolina to disclose anything more than that to their interests. Within the next ten years the dreams of a half century will be realized, and Knoxville will have di-

A Shower of Worms.

Baltimore Sun Those who were out soon after sunrise yesterday morning, when it was quite warm, with a mild atmosphere, observed thousands of worms crawling on the streets and sidewalks. They impossible for them to have come out through the solid Schillinger pavement -hence the hypothesis is they were rained down during the shower of Wednesday night, and must have descended from a mild atmosphere in the upper regions. When the sun's heat grew more powerful most of them died or recollection of many Baltimoreans. These singular creatures were seen by many persons in the city, as well as those residing on the suburbs.

How They Feed a Prima Donna. This being the age of indiscretions, we are almost bound to be indiscreet. For the benefit, therefore, of future cantatrices we will reveal la Patti's diet. When she wakes in the morning she drinks a cup of chocolate. Thi been invented especially for her by an ingenious cook. On days when she sings la Patti breakfasts at eleven on eggs and meat, with Bordeaux wine and seltzer water. This is the only serious meal she eats until after the performance, when she sups. On her singing days la Patti does not dine. After breakfast she retires to her room and sleeps for a couple of hours. About four o'clock she dresses, takes a ride, then returns home and practices at the piano for an hour. Before going to the theatre she drinks a clear consomme. This hygienic system is scrupulously observed by la Patti. We may add another detail. She never opens her mouth until she has taken her chocolate; she then tries her voice by calling Caro, her chambermaid, with all her might. The servants of the house have a mot on this detail. They say of la Patti: "Quand e lle appelle Caro, elle fait trembler les vitres."
