Chemical Fertilizers,

THE QUESTION OF MATING.

being as to whether or not a young married couple can live on $1,000 a year. There is a decidedly practical gentleman who is ungallant enough to argue that such a theory is preposterous and impossible, unless, he adds, the young couple lives in bed and thus does away with the necessity of clothes, lights or fuel. A young lady—and of course both these persons write anonymously-contend that such a thing is not only possible, but the very thing. She puts rents at $15 a month and provisions at $25 a month. These two items exhaust $480-leaving, after clothes, fuel, etc., are provided for by her calculation, $160 for "whatever may happen." The bachelor writer is cruel enough to suggest in this connection that the young lady has very little idea of "whatever may happen," and that $160 is hardly enough money to meet the contingency. And so the discussion

The Constitution, devoted to the discussion of all material subjects, must take a hand in this one. To begin with, it may be remarked that it is pretty close shaving for a young couple to live on $1,000 per annum-and yet we contend that it can be done-and provision made, too, for "whatever may happen." In the first place, a home large enough to be happy in, and pretentious enough for people who remember that it is the hostess and not the house that charms the guest, can be had for $15 a month. We base these calculations, it must be remarked, on Atlanta, merely premising them with the statement that persons living in cities where they are impossible figures ought to come to Atlanta to live. Let us say, however, that the house costs $20 a month—this eats up for rent $240. As to the provision account, that need not go over $25 a month, and it may be kept a shade un-and even kept comfortable and happy, after something "has happened," on less than $1,000 a year. What man would not be willing to deny himself all the luxuries of life and a reasonable share of its comforts, in order to establish a home for himself and light happy homes-and hearthstones that years, is not very much in love. But then why theorize on this subject? It is one pudding of which the only proof is the eating. Why not, then, have the matter settled by an ap-kneeling pair, while the preacher pronounced the words that made them one, and closed the argument. We guarantee the bachelor would find himself the owner of a hearthstone over which all the felicities would swarm as household

The placidity of expression worn by a man who is "next" in a full barber shop cannot be counterfeited even by an old maid with her first love letter. "What was the oldest thing Gen. Grant met with abroad?" asked Smith. "The pyramids, of course," said Jones. "No," said Smith. "I see that Grant, while in Havana, visited the American circus." "Well, you don't mean to say that the American circus is older than the Egyptian pyramids?" "Perhaps not." said Smith, "but it's jokes, you know, it's jokes!" Jones caved.

The Language of the Hair. Having already given our readers the language of the mouth," we herewith present for their enlightenment the "language of the hair;" Straight, lank, stringy-looking hair indicates weakness and cowardice. Curly hair denotes a quick temper. Frizzy hair, set on one's head as if each individual hair were hanvy homes—and heartstones that coarseness. Black hair indicates persistent resolution in accomplishing an object, also a strong predisposition to ready to fight its neighbor, denotes avenge wrongs and insults—real or fancied. Brown hair denotes fondness for life, a friendly disposition, ambition, earnestness of purpose, capacity for business, reliability in friendship, in proportion as the hair is fine. Very fine hair indicates an even disposition, a readiness to forgive, with a desire to add to the happiness of others. Persons with very fine light brown or auburn hair, inclined to curl or friz, are burn hair, inclined to curl or friz, are quick-tempered, and are given to re-sentment and revenge. Light brown hair, inclined to redness, with a freckled skin, is a certain indication of deceit treachery, and a disposition to do something mean to a friend who can no longer be used to advantage. We give this as we find it, and it is about as true

It was ascertained that the National Hotel, near the South Carolina depot, was on fire, and though the firemen proceeded to the spot and worked like heroes, it was not possible to check the flames until the building and most of its contents were completely destroyed. The building was the property of Mr. Joyner, and was sometimes known as Joyner's Hotel. He estimates his loss at about $15,000, with an insurance of $6,500. Mr. Swaffield expressed that it was of incendiary origin. It spread with great rapidity,

It is necessary to say that the young ladies were merging into womanhood and were exceedingly good looking. No sooner had we arrived before the blenny tank than one of the fish, happening to turn his head, caught sight of the unusual spectacle, and instantly rushed to the front.
