Parks Cooper and Jno. Campbell, both colored, were convicted in Yorkville day Lefore yesterday, of the crime of burning the dwelling house of Capt. Allen Jones, of Rock Hill. It will be remembered that one of them, Campbell, was arrested in this city about two months ago, and eighteen months after the crime was committed. Bill Sandifer, who was engaged with them, turned State's evidence. The convicted men were sentenced to the penitentiary for life, the jury having recommended mer-

A quick, nervous old gentleman from, Gaston, walking with a heavy hickory stick, was standing talking to a friend on the street the other day. One of the city's funny men approached him behind and executed on the calf of the old man's leg the new and entertaining joke of a pinch accompanied with the imita-tion of a small dog's bark. The Gaston county hickory came round with a whiz like a minnie ball as the old man yelled.

Jailing for Costs. On a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Kershaw, of South Carolina, it. was decided that a magistrate had no right to imprison for costs when bond had been given upon an arrest for a breach of the peace. Imprisonment for costs in crials before magistrates has excited much discussion in this community. There must certainly be something wreng with a system which develops so many cases in which people are arrested for trivial offences, taken before a magistrate and sent to jail for costs alone, the offence not being considered of sufficient consequence for a fine. It strikes us that judicial capacity should not be dependent for its reward upon its judgments.

Sell Your Cotton.

Correspondence of The Observer. Gentlemen, those of you who are holding cotton for higher prices, may realize your expectations, yet it seems evident that chances are against you. I have given particular attention to the cetton movements for the last fifteen years, and if we are to be governed by the past there is no possible chance for an advance. Prices were equally as good last December as they have been since. To-day we are 400,000 bales ahead of last year, all manufacturers throughout the world know. With this great excess of cotton ahead, how can we possibly look for higher prices. Besides there is a universal effort on the part of producers to increase their planting, and never were more commercial fertilizers purchased up to this time. The recent heavy rains seem to have no effect on receipts. Charlotte has about 1,800 bales of cotton stored, owned by buyers and planters, and I am reliably informed that throughout the cotton belt more cotton is being held than usual for this season. The staple has been sellvery well, early in the fall, when cotton sold here at 91/4c, a good many farmers who sold at the above figures said 10 cents would be a fair price, and season. At one time prices ran up to 13c for some fancy grades, but only remained so for twenty-four hours. The only grade of cotton that has declined much is stains, and we all know they had ample room. However, the tumble in stains will not amount to much, as most planters have sold them, and held their better cotton. Ten cents now would look low for good cotton, but be careful you don't sell for less before the summer is gone.
