"God has not breathed the breath of "God has not breathed the breath of life into the nostrils of the man, or set of men, who can again thwart and de-feat the fairly and legally expressed will of this people—mark that!"—HON. W. H. ENGLISH, OF INDIANA, IN NEW YORK HERALD.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL BILL.

When the Legislature was convened on the 15th of March it was thought that if any general legislation was decided on, the Public School Bill, which failed to become a law because it was not signed by the presiding officers of the two houses, would certainly be among the measures to be acted on. It could not come before the extra session except as new subject, and after discussing the matter in all its bearing, it was thought best to let the whole question go over to the regular session. Mr. Scarborough, the superintendent of Public Instruction, said he had sent out all his instructions to teachers and others throughout the State, under the provisions of the old law, and that even if the new law was passed it could not be put into operation before next year, as all the assessments under the old law had already been made for the present year. While Mr. Scarborough is known to be in favor of the bill which failed to become a law at the last session, he is nevertheless firmly convinced that it would not have hastened matters by to re-enact it at the extra session. The Legislature took his advice, and it is understood that the whole matter will be re-opened at the regular session which convenes next January.

For some time there have been certain rumors in circulation reflecting in a vague sort of manner upon some one original bill. Jo Turner's attention was early directed to that question, and tee of investigation was appointed. decline. That committee, in the last hours of the extra session reported that they were unable to place the blame upon any particular person or persons, and were of the opinion that no officer of the General Assembly or of the State was im- obtained a divorce from his wife, marduties in a creditable manner upon the the success of his suit against his last day of the session, upon which day wife. and the only day the school bill could have been signed. They attribute the failure of the ratification of the school legislation on the last day of the session. After this decision the whole subject was dropped until the matter comes up at the next regular session.

The monthly statement of the bereau of statistics shows that the balance of trade in favor of the United States that has been kept up so long is falling off very rapidly. During the month of February it fell off from twenty-nine and a half millions in 1879 to only four and a quarter millions in 1880. During the twelve months ended with February the falling off was over ninety-two millions; or about one-third.

After all the State of North Carolina is to get possession of the Governor's letter books captured by the Federals at the close of the war, and now held, with other Confederate records, by the United States government. It was the "garbled extracts" from these that served Judge Settle such good purpose during his campaign against Governor Vance in 1876.

The report comes from Indiana that Gov. Hendricks is greatly annoyed by intimations from various quarters that he would run as second on a ticket with Seymour, Bayard or Hancock. Of course a man has a right to say what he won't do, but he occasionally loses in the end by a refusal to take that which is offered him.

Col. Tom Keogh told the boys up at Washington, on his return from this State, that the North Carolina delegation would stand twelve for Grant and eight for Sherman in the Chicago convention. The colonel's recent figuring on the prospects of Grant, given in an interview in this paper, is also attracting some attention.

John Sherman is alarmed at the growing opposition to him in his own State, and has left Washington for Ohio to see what's the matter with that portion of his diminutive boom which lies in that State.

Decline with Thanks.

WASHINGTON, March 31.-SENATE.-Cameron, of Wisconsin, rose to what he deemed to amount to a question of privilege. He stated that he was surprised to see that the testimony of E.S. Webber, taken before the sub-commitof the case laid on the Senator's desks, though owing to his failure to appear before the committee for cross examination the committee had agreed to strike his direct examination out. A note stating that the committee had agreed to strike out the testimony appears on the very last page of the volume, but a great many of those who might read the evidence would not see this note, and Cameron desired by his remarks to prevent Webber's evidence from pre-udicing Kellogg. Hill said that on page 1,185 of the re-cord of the committee's proceedings the order to strike Webber's testimony out appeared. He supposed that Webber's testimony taken in New Orleans was put into type before the full committee decided to have it stricken out, therefore, though technically stricken out, it was not physically stricken out. Every-body could see by the record that Web-ber's testimony was not a part of it. Hill, in this connection, stated that two affidavits ordered stricken out by him, also appeared in the printed volume. He was not a printer, but supposed that it was customary to print the whole proceedings and let them speak for themselves. Saulsbury, chairman of the committee, said the superientendency of printing testimony taken before the committee, had always been left to the stenographer. He had not thought it necessarv to personally supervise the print-

Morrill asked Saulsbury if he had any objection to having Webber's testimony actually stricken out. Saulsbury had none except that it would make necessary the reprinting of the whole edition of the report. Dawes thought the incorrect reports should be withdrawn and a correct edition printed. The volumes went into public libraries all over the country and the Senate should not stick at the expense of a few thousand dollars to correct an error prejudicial to one of the parties to the case. Logan, member of the committee, moved that the record of the case be corrected either by reprinting or by leaving out the parts ordered by the committee to be stricken out.

Saulsbury and Hill saw no objection to this motion. Garland said the only parliamentary way to correct the testimony was to rethe statutes so as to allow any vessel not of the United States to unload at any port of delivery in a custom col'ec-tion district which the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, after due en-try of said vessel and cargo at a port of entry in the same district. Placed on on the calendar

----THE KING'S MOUNTAIN CENTENNI- | called yesterday for the purpose of iden-AL.

The Kings Mountain centennial celebration received quite a boom from the legislature of North Carolina, at the recent extra session, in the appropriation of a "sum not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars" for the purpose of erecting a monument to perpetuate the memory of the battle of King's Mountain. The South Carolina legislature had already the same object, and it has been stated that Tennesee either has appropriated or buted by private citizens, and it is probable that as much as five or six thousand dollars will be raised.

Blaine offered an amendment providing that employees of the government printing office shall have the same holidays as other government employes without losing their pay therefor. Davis, of West Virginia, opposed this as general legislation on an appropriation bill, to which he objected. Blaine asked Dayis if he would carry out that principle by voting against the marshals clause in this bill. Davis replied that the Senate could not control the action of the House. To vote for the House bill was very different from voting for Blaine's amendment.

Edmunds opposed Blaine's amend-ment, and raised the point of order against it that it proposed general legislation on a general appropriation bill. The presiding officer (Rollins) ruled that the pending bill was not a general appropriation bill, and that Blaine's amendment was in order. Edmunds appealed from the ruling.

A debate ensued as to what constituted a general appropriation bill, in the course of which Blaine said he was opposed to the clause in this bill regulating the appointment of special deputy marshals, because it was vicious in itself, and not because it was attached to an appropriation bill. To oppose it be-cause it was on an appropriation bill was to make a petty objection. It was partisan in design, mischievous in interest and disastrous in consequences. After further discussion the chair reversed his ruling, saying that while under the first clause of rule 29 the amendment seemed admissible, under the whole rule it was not in order. Mr. Blaine was dissatisfied with this ruling, and an animated and amusing colloquy ensued between him and Car-
