BEAVER HUNTING.

Facts About Their Habits and How to Catch Them. Gainesville (Ga.) Eagle. A few days ago, while in Jackson county, a reporter met two beaver trappers from near Rome, Ga. They have trapped for the varmints in Alabama, Florida and Tennessee, and on this trip have set their traps on all the streams from Rome down as far as the lower were five feet wide. One of the men beavers for ten years, and found it very proficable and to possess quite a charm for him. He uses a gum which, he says, in tradition and habit of thought, is will draw a beaver more than a mile. competing very actively and success-The same family, he says, will use it fully in every branch of trade and for ten miles up and down a stream, traffic with the other races. He says a beaver always cuts a tree, cornstalk or ceeds from the fact that the Hebrews anything else, so it will fall toward the stream, and one never cuts a bad ear of corn down. He sets out twenty traps at a time, and has caught during his career as trapper more than 600 beavers. He said that his gum was so attractive to heavers that he would get attractive to beavers that he would get the same beaver in another trap the same night if it should get away. He same high if it should get away. He and his magazine, the Grenzboten, has puts the traps in the water, chained to a small pole, which floats on the water, and when the beavers get caught they fight the trap until they are drowned if it catches a foreleg, but if it catches a hindleg it runs under a log and sometimes gets out on the bank, with float, trap and all Beavers never eat fish as

A Noted Frigate. From the New York Sun. The old frigate Constellation, which started on Saturday with a cargo of food and clothing for the starving peasants in Ireland, is almost as well known | -of a process of natural selection and in American naval history as the fa- survival of the fittest. The Anglomous Constitution, whose repeated victories earned for her the name of Old Saxon who make money usually leaves it to a son whose chief ambition is to lation, won the year after she was launched, over the French frigate Insurgente, occasioned great rejoicing. Not long afterward she met the French man-of-war Vengeance, much her superior in force, and, after a desperate al application of the economies of nabattle, so riddled the enemy with can-non shot that he could barely crawl into port. By the unfortunate loss of her mainmast the Constellation was prevented from making a prize of the Frenchman. These victories aroused the greatest enthusiasm, and made the navy universally popular.

Peter Cooper Retires from Politics. Peter Cooper, who, in the campaign of 1876, was the candidate of the greenback-labor party for President, gives notice of his final retirement from ac-tive participation in politics, in the sub-joined letter to the secretary of the greenback organization of Kings county, New York, and signed by the curator of the Cooper Union: "Mr. Cooper desires me to say that he has entirely withdrawn from all active participation in the politics of the day, and especially all local politics. He must content himself, now in his 89th year, and still full of cares and responsibilities, with doing no more than merely expressing his political opinions, on naional subjects, orally and in his pamphlets. Of these last you are welcome to such as you can use profitably in your

BACE APTITUDES.

What May be Expected from the Oriental of the Future. Of all the magnificent speculations and gorgeous dreams of Earle Beaaconsfield, none have awakened a deeper interest in the minds of the thoughtful or been more frequently jeered at by the frivolous than his forecastings of the future of Oriental races. His thoughts on this subject, while clothed and clouded in a sort of Turneresque at-mosphere, are undoubtedly deep and sincere. The visions of his Tancred and other novels have been realized in the acquisition of Cyprus and the coronation of the Empress of India, and the EVER EXHIBITED IN THIS MARKET. control of the Suez canal may easily be adjusted to some yet undeveloped scheme for the accomplishment of the dream which restores the focal point of empire to Syria. Beaconsfield sees in the Oriental mind aptitudes and tendencies restoring to it all its ancient control in the domain of conquest, of speculation and of art. More practical thinkers fancy that they discover in some of the Oriental races peculiar ap-titudes for the conduct of business and the accumulation of property and wealth, which are strong enough to put the Western and other races at a continually greater disadvantage as the competitien for the trade of the world gets to be more severe and exigent. In Africa and amongst the Malays, the Arbs from Muscat and Zanzibar have secured almost an entire control of business. They reap all the profits of the trade in cloths, in pearls, spice, ivories, gold dust and slaves. In the farther East, in Siam, Burmah, the edge of Jackson county. They had caught sixteen beavers in one week in Jackson county alone. They caught five coast everywhere, in Australia and Jackson county alone. The Constellation was one spend it; the grandchildren of our rich of the several war vessels launched in 1798, when the renown of Paul Jones's rich Jew's son gets richer; his grandson great sea fight yet fired the sailors of the young republic with emulation. England was as yet unconquered on the sea, and a British brig was counted a match for a frigate of any other nation. It was the Constellation and her sister. It was the Constellation and her sister ships built in the same year that in the war of 1812 fairly astonished the world by meeting the British frigates single handed and forcing them to strike their flags. March 19.

Chicago Times. NEW YORK, March 31.-W. H. Vanderbilt has within the past week told his intimate friends that he desires to be relieved at an early day of the responsibilities of railroad management. He feels, it is said, that he has no motive for further augmenting his immense possessions by continuing an active business career. He has no ambition yet unsatisfied which requires him to carry any longer the immense responsibility of great public interests. He desires, therefore, to dispose, as speedily as he can without sacrifice, of all controlling interests he has owned in the transportation systems of the country, and to place his property largely in Government bonds, and henceforth to live as the Astors are living, not upon his investments in productive in-dustries, but upon the interest of his loans and the rents of his estate. Vanderbilt, it may be said here, is pushing the work upon his new Fifth most costly private residence in the country, except that of Mrs. A. T. Stewart. He is adding from time to time to the number of flyers in his stables, and has has developed a wonderful interest A Question of Sex, Not of Hat.
