Serravallo's Tonic

From having been intimate for a number of years with the proprietors of Serravallo's Tonic, I have seen much of its manufacture and its use. There are men in the community—well known citizens—who were victims in early life to Syphilis, the most terrible curse that ever afflicted the human family, and who have taken the S. Tonic, and are now, to all appearances, and in their own belief, as free from the taint disease as the first man, fresh from the hands of his Maker. I believe of course for their public recommendations of this medicine, but I am allowed to refer to the skeptic privately to those who will endorse everything that can be said in its favor. Being professionally much opposed to endorsing or recommending nostrums or secret remedies, it is with hesitation that I attach my name to this article; but I know whereof I speak when I say that our science has not yet made a combination equal to this for the purpose indicated. The hundreds of thousands of its citizens would be to purchase this receipt of its proprietors, and make it public for the benefit of the present and all coming generations. T. L. MASSENBURG, Ph. G. Prepared only by the SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, Albany, N. Y. Sold by Z. C. Smith and L. R. Weston & Co. Call on your druggist for a copy of "Young Men's Friend." No. 26—d&w.

BEAUTIES OF POLYGAMY.

A Striking Illustration of the Celestial Order of Marriage.

Salt Lake Anti-Polygamy Standard.

The following was related by the wife of a noted United States explorer to a Gentle lady of this city, who will vouch for its genuineness: "While traveling in Southern Utah we came to a small settlement where we were detained for a day or two by inclement weather. We found shelter in the humble but neat and hospitable home of a monogamist saint, whose family hated polygamy and through whose influence we were permitted to escape at some of the beastliness that characterizes the peculiar institution. Only a short distance from the dwelling of my friendly entertainers there stood a miserable adobe hut, I could not conscientiously call it a house, where three women and their three wives, all of whom had families. My hostess made some neighborly errand an excuse for paying them a visit, and permitted me to accompany her; but before going she made me acquainted with the relationship existing between the three women who were living with and had borne children to the same man.

"The first and second women were sisters. The latter had been a widow with one child when she married her sister's husband. When this child had grown to be about 16 years old her step-father had also married her, but after a few months she left and was sealed to another man as a plural wife, by whom she had two children. Then he died and she returned to her first husband, bringing her children with her, the eldest of whom at the time I am speaking of was a girl 15 years old, and my informant stated for a fact that the old wretch had thoughts of marrying her too. When we entered the hut the scene that met my eyes totally beggars description. Imagine one low, smoky, filthy room serving as living room and sleeping apartment; for to three women and their offspring; some of the latter almost grown up, the majority, however, being little children. I could never have dreamed of such dirt, rags, and squalor existing in a Christian country. I had seen nothing equal to it even among the Digger Indians; in fact, the latter were quite civilized in comparison. But the worst of my story is yet to come.

"The girl of whom my hostess had spoken as a probable bride of her grandfather was sitting in a corner sobbing and crying. Upon inquiring the cause of her distress, we were told quite frankly that her grandfather had given her a severe chastisement for speaking disrespectfully about polygamy and declaring that she would never become the wife of her mother's and grandmother's husband. When we left I could not restrain my indignation, and I said: "What a lovely religion that is, to make such beasts out of human creatures!"

"It is not religion, but the lack of it, that makes them beasts; quietly rejoined my hostess, 'and you will find many cases as bad as this one if you travel far in Utah.'

"But the sequel is still more horrible. About a year afterward we had occasion to pass through that particular settlement again, and for a day were the guests of our former hostess. She told me that the young girl was really sealed to her grandfather, being literally forced into it by her own mother and grandmother under circumstances so revolting that delicacy forbids me from repeating them even to one of my own sex. Even in that polygamous community the excitement was so great that talk was had of lynching the degraded trio—the man and the two elder women—but the feeling soon passed over, and was eventually forgotten or only remembered as an episode of this peculiar religion.

Yankee Veracity.

The Graphic.

The Englishman seldom changes his business or profession. The representative American is a natural jack-at-all-trades—sowing and planting, perhaps, to-day, teaching school next week, next year practicing law. He will undertake anything, offer himself for anything, backed by an astounding confidence in self and in the "good genius" of luck. I have in California seen a young man of twenty-seven, brought up to no trade or profession, superintending the building of a magnificent road over these Alps of America, the Sierra Nevada. He directed the operations of surveyors and bridge builders, as well as the finance and supply departments; for his forces, one hundred miles from the nearest settlement, required the baggage train of a small army. In various kinds of skilled labor he found his tools. His was the executive capacity to use them. This man was not "brought up." He came up. His education embraced merely the three R's, "reading," "riting" and "rithmetic." He then he grapples with the world. A few months in the village store, a few more at a trade, which is abandoned half-learned, a voyage or two at sea. Arrived in some frontier town he seeks not the vocation for which he may be specially fitted, but looks for whatever there may be to do. Let there be an opening to fill and he does not ask himself whether his is the exact mould to fill it. No. He rushes in and where he doesn't fit he trims off a patch here or adds one there until he makes a rough fit.

Sun-Down Spring.

Mt. Sterling (Ky.) Dem.

There is in Hart county, what is known as the "Sun-Down Spring." The Democrat says the water of this spring flows incessantly during the day in a stream the size of a man's arm, but as the sun nears the western horizon it grows perceptibly less, making a peculiar sound, heard at a distance of fifty feet, and then just to the minute the sun sets, stops running. This phenomenon occurs daily.

A Remarkable Suicide.

A Boston dispatch to the New York Herald gives the following particulars of a peculiar and ingeniously-executed suicide, heretofore briefly reported as having occurred at Chelsea, Mass.: "Two days ago a farmer named Pillsbury had occasion to go to Newburyport, and he left his son, Stephen M., 23 years of age, in charge of the farm. When Mr. Pillsbury returned, about noon, Monday, he looked in vain for his son. Mr. Pillsbury approached the barn, unlocked the door, and in a moment thereafter a horrible sight met his gaze. On the large sharp axe, so that it moved up and down in a groove. This axe was held in its place by a water pot filled with water, attached to a lever, which in turn was made to support the axe. In the groove of the axe was a small hole, so that when sufficient water had leaked from it to overcome the leverage above, the axe would fall. When all arrangements had been made the young man got upon his knees, and, putting his head through an aperture made at the bottom, calmly awaited death. He had previously supplied himself with about two pounds of ether, and while the water was slowly dripping from the pot he held a small tumbler containing the ether. When he found the head was only hanging to the body by a small piece of flesh.

Strong and Well.—The Latest News from Mr. Seymour.

Correspondence of Richmond Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—When Senator Kearney was at Union, his location, recently, he saw Governor Seymour every day. The Governor requested him to discourage every proposition he heard in favor of his nomination at Cincinnati. Senator Kearney said: "I will do anything you want except to tell people you are in bad health, when you are going about every day on foot with an elastic tread, and with your eyes as bright as when you were a young man."

At Seymour could not deny that he is well and active. Senator Johnston, chairman of the Senate agricultural committee, received a letter from him to-day urging action to prevent the spread of the cattle disease. At the bottom of the letter, in a bold, manly hand of one who is perfectly well, he wrote a complimentary notice of the Senator's address delivered last fall before the Virginia State agricultural society. I heard Major John W. Daniel to-day ask a meeting in the Senate Chamber in the House who he was for President, and he replied: "I am for Seymour, because I believe he can certainly win. The fact is that if New York presents him at Cincinnati he will go through almost by acclamation, and then he cannot decline."

A Lesson to a "Lady-Killer."

Newark (N. J.) Advertiser.

A sensational story is told of a young "lady-killer" of New York, and his humiliating experience in attempting to form the acquaintance of a young lady residing in Elm street, in this city. The names of both parties are suppressed for obvious reasons. The story is that the young lady, who is, of course, attractive, was intently reading in the cars at the Jersey City depot on Friday afternoon, when a note was dropped into her lap by an employe, who instantly disappeared. In her excitement she put it into her pocket without reading, and on reaching home told her father of the occurrence and gave him the note, which proved to be a request for her address to be sent to the care of a South William street merchant. A consultation ensued, resulting in a letter written by the young lady's uncle "Henry" and copied by her, favoring his acquaintance and appointing a meeting in Military Park, she accordingly met him there and he was unexpectedly conducted to her home and introduced to the family circle, which was assembled in full force, and after an embarrassing remark was made to depart with promises not to do so again.

Denis Kearney in the House of Correction.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—In the Police Court this morning the prosecuting attorney asked for the commitment of Denis Kearney. The latter was not present at the time, but a few minutes later he appeared, with his counsel, who asked for delay, to enable him to make application to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus. The court denied the request as unusual and extraordinary. The commitment was then made out, and Kearney, evidently depressed and chagrined, was taken below. In a few minutes he was removed to a hack and driven to the House of Correction, where, after going through the hands of the warden and the convict's garb, he was placed in a cell. As Kearney left the court room he asked the judge if the commitment contained any reference to the provision of the new constitution fixing eight hours as the day's labor. The judge replied that the superintendent of the House of Correction would see that he had sufficient work to do, and not too much. His counsel will apply for a writ of habeas corpus at an early date, and is expected to avail the prisoner anything.

Fort Johnson.

Judge Cantwell delivered a lecture in Wilmington, Tuesday night. The Star's report says: The lecturer stated that Fort Johnson, named after Gen. Gabriel Johnson, was built in 1745, and since then it has passed through the hands of five different governments—the Proprietary, the Colonial, the State, the Federal and Confederate. Many new facts in our early history were mentioned, among them one not generally known, and that was that Cornelius Harnett who marched at the head of a body of armed men, numbering nearly six hundred, to Brunswick, and demanded of Gov. Tryon in person that Pennington, who had been appointed stampmaster in the place of James Houston, should be delivered up. This account, taken from Gov. Tryon's letter-book in the executive office, at Raleigh, clearly shows that Harnett was the master spirit in the movement.
