matured on the subject, which provides that no single return from a State shall be rejected unless by the concurrent vote of both houses, and in case of two returns, that return which both houses concur in pronouncing the true one shall be counted. It was held that this was just and safe, and if adopted would work well. There was not much idea, however, that either it or any other method would be adopted and as above intimated, it was not considered that at present there was any imminent necessity for action. Senator Bayard was of the opinion that it was perfectly com-petent and perhaps would be better for each State to provide a method of determining any questions which may arise as to the electoral vote in such

State, but it was admitted, of course, that no such plan as this was possible in regard to the next presidential election. It does not appear to be consider-will be deemed of sufficient moment to call another caucus on it. Incidentally the great desire of all to secure an early Modernized Version of the Old Oaken Bucket.

Mr. J C. Bayles, in the Sanitarian, gives the following revision of the popular song of "The Old Oaken Bucket," which, we fear, has more of truth, if less of 1 octry, than the original:

With what anguish of mind I remember my childhood.

Recalled in the light of a knowledge since gained:
The malarious farm, the wet, fungus grown wild-

The scum-covered duck pond, the pig sty close by it, The ditch where the sour-smelling house-drain-The damp, shaded dwelling, the foul barn-yard But worse than all else was that terrible well,
And the old oaken backet—the mould crusted bucket—

The moss-covered bucket-that hung in the well.

The water I drank in the days called to mind. Ere I knew what professors and scientists gifted In the water of wells by analysis find. The rotting wood-fiber, the oxide of iron,
The algæ, the frog of unusual size;
The water-impure as the verses of Byron-Are things I remember with tears in my eyes.

Just think of it! Moss on the vessel that lifted

And to tell the sad truth—though I shudder to think it—
I considered the water uncommonly clear,
And often at noon, when I went there to drink it, I enjoyed it as much as I now enjoy beer. How ardent I seized it with hands that were grimy And quick to the mud-covered bottom it fell; Then soon, with its nitrates and nitrites, and slimy With matter organic, it rose from the well.

Oh! had I but realised, in time to swoid them,
The dangers that lurked in that pestilent draught,
I'd have tested for organic germs and destroyed With petassic permanganate ere I had quaffed Or perchance I'd have bolled it and afterward strained it Through filters of charcoal and gravel combined Or, after distilling, condensed and regained it In potable form, with its filth left behind.

How little I knew of the dread typhoid fever Which lurked in the water I ventured to drink! But since I've become a devoted believer In the teachings of science I shudder to think,
And now far removed from the scenes I'm describ ing, The story for warning to others to tell,

My Gretchen was a pooty girl, Dot is der solemn troot—

But ven I shpoke der pap vor her, He push me mit his boot.
