A Washington View of the Cincinnati Convention and the Seymour and Hendricks Ticket.

Special to Baltimore Sun. WASHINGTON, June 14.—Democratic Senators and Representatives who are delegates to the Cincinnati convention are almost universally of the opinion. that the sessions of the convention will not last beyond two or three days, and that nothing is likely to occur to mar the perfect harmony of its deliberations. A prominent Senator who will be there as a delegate said to-day that he believthe gonvention met, and when it did last two or three months as to the posi-tive declination of Mr. Seymour to perrefuse the Democratic nomination if tendered him. Not one of these statements has come directly from Mr. Seymour or from any one authorized to speak for him, but most, if not all of montor from any one subtrovised to the them, have emanated from some density or so ago a certain that on the a candidate. Remarkable Career of a Social Imposter in New York. Washington Gazette.

A remarkable career of social impos-ture came to an end not long since in New York in the death of one Haase, a barber of that city. This person, strange as it may seem, lived two en-tirely different and distinct lives: in the shore at home he was barber Hasse. the shop at home he was barber Haase; in the great world of New York "society" he was Baron de Maincy, or, as he was more familiarly known, "Baron Carlos." As Baron Carlos he was introduced into what are called the best circles of New York. Silly fashionable women were delighted to be noticed by this tonsorial artist en mufli, and he was generally a favorite with the females who were honored with his acquaintance. Carlos scraped the chins of his customers, and the beau monde the shop at home he was barber Haase; of his customers, and the beau monde of New York struggled to scrape his acquaintance.

In this way of mutual interchange the world and Baron Carlos maintained strangely diversified but agreeable relations. But a time came at last when M. de Maincy met a customer who was neither to be trifled with nor duped. Death, a more accomplished harlequin—more protean in his disguises—than even our Baron, called in on him one day quietly, and there was an end of

As Baron de Maincy his death was certified to, and a genteel tremor ran through "society" at the announcement that the social lion was no more. Indeed, but for a little matter of moneytriffe in the way of an inheritance awaiting his widow-for there was a Mme. Haase—in beautiful France, Murray Hill and thereabouts might have gone down to its grave, as it were, in ignorance of the truth of the imposture. But Mme. Haase learned that by a French law it was necessary for a wife to obtain her husband's consent or show proof of his death, before taking a legacy. Upon this statement of stubborn facts she applied to the Supreme Court to have his death certificate altered to his real name of Haase. in order that she might present it in France as proof of her widowhood, and in this prosaic way of business was it that the carefully-kept secret became known. Last week the court ordered ed everything would be arranged before the change to be made, and Mme. the convention met, and when it did meet it would all be plain sailing. There has been much published within the last two or three months as to the posilast two or three months as to the positive declination of Mr. Seymour to permit his name to be brought before the convention and his determination to leged scions of nobility who present themselves as acquaintances of their daughters. Old residents of Washington may remember how some half a century or so ago a certain tailor in this city assumed—after dark—to be a
