The Scotch-Irish in the Carolinas.

At the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the settlement of the Cumberland Valley, Pa., on the 8th instant, at Doubling Gap Springs, Rev. J. W. P. Otis, pastor of the Chambers Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, read a paper upon the subject of "The Pennsylvania Scotch-Irish in the Carolinas."

Rev. Mr. Otis, after referring to the fact of his being a South Carolinian by birth and a Pennsylvanian by residence, and eulogizing the Scotch-Irish for their enterprise and thrift, said: Let us go back as near to the beginning as we can and we will find out that the Scotch-Irish were first Irish-Scotchmen and then Scotch-Irishmen.

In the third century the Scots migrated through North-eastern Europe, by Belgium and the North of France, and settled in Ireland. The Scots were, therefore, Irishmen before they settled in Scotland, and Irishmen they remained for 300 years.

About the middle of the sixteenth century King James contacted the lands of several Irish nobles in the North of Ireland, who had conspired against his government.

The Scotch-Irish in the sixteenth century. Thus, after the lapse of nearly a thousand years, the Scots, whom Ireland gave to Caledonia of old, came back to occupy their ancestral homes, and the Irish Scots now became the Scotch-Irish.

About the beginning of the eighteenth century the English government began to do all that was possible to suppress the Scotch-Irish in the north of Ireland.

The Scotch-Irish began to emigrate in large numbers to Pennsylvania. These emigrants landed principally at New Castle, Delaware, and Philadelphia.
