ASK the recovered dyspeptics, Billious sufferers, victims of Fever and Ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered hearth, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

This justly celebrated medicine, Regulates, the Liver, promotes digestion, and fortifies the system against malarial diseases.

Extract of a letter from Hon-Alexander H. Stevens, "Locca-sionally use when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect. It is mild, and suits me better than more active remedies." CONSTITATION. TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA—I have used Siminous Liver Regulator for constipation of my bowels, caused by a femporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver—at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it. HIRAM WARNER, Chief Justice of Georgia.

The Blue and the Gray for Hancock.

From the flowery greves of the Southland And the fields of cotton and cane, To the wonderful lakes of the Northland And the pine-ciad hills of Maine.

Brave men are dwelling by thousands, Who once were so hot to slay, When some wore the blue of the Union, And others Confederate gray.

The passions of war have subsided,
Its hatreds have gone with the past,
And now, like an army of brothers,
They all come together at last.

Was bravest among the brave,
And who, when the fighting was ended,
Was first to console and save.

With him are his war-tried soldiers, And those that he faced in the fray; The men who wore blue are for Hancock, With those who have worn the gray.

For brotherneod over the land, They are forming shoulder to shoulder, And are marching hand in hand.

Say those who have worn the gray.
"Away with all sectional feeling!"

The blue-coated veterans say.

They rally for peace and for union,

For Hancock they rally in gray.

And who shall dare say them nay? They rally in blue for Hancock,

Now, "Down with all thoughts of disunion!"

THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN.

Desperate Methods to be Used to Elect Garfield.

The Republicann organization known as the "Boys in Blue" is again in the field and will work strenuously to secure the election of Garfield and Arthur. In 1877 Gen. Grant was made chairman of the organization, succeeding General Dix, who had resigned.

In January last the officers commanding sections in the various States were instructed to organize actively for the Presidential campaign, and a week since General Grant was requested to take some action looking to having a general order issued to the entire association of the country. He responded as follows: HEADQ'RS UNION VETERANS' UNION,) "BOYS IN BLUE," NEW YORK, July 22, 1880.

I. The members for each State of the national committee of the Union Veterans' Union will at once proceed to organize the "Boys in Blue" in their respective States to promote the election of Garfield and Arthur.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 1.

II. The organization of "Boys in Blue" will report to the department commanders in their respective States.
By order of U. S. GRANT, By order of

Commander-in-Chief "Boys in Blue."

DRAKE DEKAY, Adjutant-General.

The first State taking action in accordance with General Grant's orders was New York, General Charles K.

Graham issuing the following:

NEW YORK, July 23, 1880.

I.—In compliance with General
Orders No. 1, from our Commander-in-Chief, the "Boys in Blue" throughout the State of New York are hereby invited to organize companies at once to promote the election of Garfield and Arthur.

IL—The maximum number of men to constitute a company is fixed at 100 and the minimum at 50:

III.—As soon as a company is recruit-ed to the minimum quota it should pro-ceed to elect by ballot its commissioned officers, viz: captain, first lieutement and second lieutenant. The captain will appoint the proper non-commissioned officers.

IV.—The captain of each company, as soon as elected, will forward by mail

Obedience to the Law Is the Citizens Highest Duty.

Washington Post. On September 24, 1867, while Gen. Hancock was on his way to New Orleans to take command there, a grand ovation was tendered him at the Metropolitan Hotel in this city. The National Intelligencer of the next day, speaking of the ovation, said: "When considered that it was a spontaneous offering of the citizens of the District it may be regarded as a triumphant recognition of the noble character of the citizen and soldier, who was the recipient of the honor paid him on this occa-

An immense audience was assembled and Gen. Hancock was introduced by Hon. Amasa Cobb, of Wisconsin, then a Republican member of Congress, and now a Republican judge of the Supreme Court of Nebraska. Gen. Hancock was received with much applause and replied as follows:

CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON-I thank you for this testimony of your confidence in my ability to perform my duty in a new and different sphere. Educated as a soldier in the military school of our country and on the field of the Mexican war and American rebellion, I need not assure you that my course as a district commander will be characterized by the same strict soldier-ly obedience to the law there taught me as a soldier. I know no other guide or higher duty. Misrepresentation and misconstruction arising from the passions of the hour, and spread by those who do not know that devotion to duty has governed my actions in every try ing hour, may meet me, but I fear them not. My highest desire will be to perform the duties of my new sphere, not in the interest of parties or partisans, but for the benefit of my country, the honor of my profession, and I trust also for the welfare of the people committed to my care. I ask, then, citizens, that time may be permitted to develop my actions. Judge me by the deeds I may perform, and conscious of my devotion to duty and my country, I shall be satis-fied with your verdict, and if a generous country shall approve my actions in the future as it has in the past, my highest ambition will have been achiev-"When an Englishman goes on a holiday be looks for fresh experience." When a Frenchman goes he tries to find a racket that he never fully finds. When a German goes on a holiday he looks for fresh leaves, and even if he has only a laurely branch on the side of a bit of grass he fancies himself under the green. When an Italian goes on a holiday he sings and puts himself into nice personal appearance, wondering whether men are as fully aware of his presence as girls would be capital of our country—bearing the capital of our country—bearing the proud name of Washington. As an American citizen the rapid develop ment and increase of its wealth, beauty and prosperity, is a matter in which I am deeply interested. But far beyond this, citizens of Washington, I rejoice with you that in the trying hour of the rebellion the capital and the Nation contributed as fully as any State in the Union to the brave volunteer army which has demonstrated to the world the strength and invincibility of a republican form of government. I shall carry with me the recollections of this ment and increase of its wealth, beauty carry with me the recollections of this occasion, and when I return may I not hope that none who are here will regret their participation in the honor you have done me to-night?

Hon. Robert J. Walker was then introduced and spoke as follows:

My FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS

-I too, am a citizen of Washington, where I have spent the better part of my life, and where I intend to pass the remainder. You have assembled here remainder. You have assembled here this evening to do honor to a brave and patriotic soldier of the Republic; to a man who, in every emergency, has proved equal to the occasion; a man who has devoted his life to the service of his country, and has shed his blood in its defense. When quite a young man he went with the great army of Gen. Scott to Mexico, and in that army was soon reckened among the most diswas soon reckened among the most diswas soon reckened among the most distinguished of the distinguished young officers of that day and was breveted for brilliant achievements in that great campaign. When the rebellion threatened to destroy the country and to leave Washington, not the capital of a great Nation, but a remnant, a solitary ruin to mark the existence of a desolated country and a dismembered Union, Gen. Hancock came forward to the defense of the Nation and the constitution and his glorious career is not Gen. Hancock came forward to the defense of the Nation and the constitution and his glorious career is not marked by one single failure. [Great applause.] And now, fellow-citizens, Gen. Hancock is entering upon a new career and, although his new trust is military still, in point of name, it has its civil duties, and imposes a task of the utmost difficulty in its proper fulfilment. I have no doubt that his laurels, marked with his blood and that of the enemies of his country, in Mexico and in the late civil war, will be increased by these civil wreaths, which will add new honors to those he earned upon the battle-field. But, fellow-citizens, while I am sure that Gen. Hancock will execute the law in a true spirit and according to the meaning that must be placed upon them, I am also sure that he will do it in a spirit of charity and kindness. For, gentlemen, the truly brave man is always magnanimous to his conquered foes; and, gentlemen, it is by the spirit of kindness and charity that we must restore the Republic—the great Union—not in name alone, but in fact, and make it what its founders intended it to be, the home of a happy and really united neo-

What conclusions do these facts seem to warrant? It would seem to have been made clearly apparant that the Republican party of Ohio have only a very small, and possibly a vanishing, margin of votes on which to calculate; that the gradual dimination of party growth since 1864 makes it imprudent to trust for a continuance of this supposed margin without much arduous work and a thorough canvass; and, finally, that Ohio's sentiment of State pride, having failed to give Mr. Hayes a decent majority, is not to be trusted to do anything substantial for Gen.
