YOUNG MEN. Dry Goods. Clothing, vr. My Lost Self.

You wonder why my eyes are dim with tears.

Then shall I telt you? Long and long agoSo long ago! years piled on weary years—
There was a little child I used to know. THIRD LOT OF And every day and night and every hour
We took life's gift together, sun and shade,
And saw the rainbow shining through the shower,
And heard the talk that building robins made.

Grand castle after castle, high in air! Ah! now I find the world a desert wild—
No room in all the sky for tower of mine,
But most of all I miss my comrade child,
Her brave, true courage and her faith divine.

Dead? Changed? I know not, sweet; I only know
That sometimes from the mirror's shining space.
In my own features worn and faded so,
I catch a glimpse of the bright, lost face.

You will no longer wonder that I weep,
My little girl, with eyes so grave and clear;
Whatever treasures we may hold or keep.
To lose one's happy self is saddest, dear!

AN OLD RELIC.

A Button Shot from Gen. Hancock's Coat at the Battle of Gettysburg. Little Rock Gazette.

FOR DIARRHEA, DYSENTERY, Yesterday a well dressed man-but this is not a fashionable article; what's the use in describing a man's dress? Any way, the man entered a store, and, taking a brass button from his pocket he handed it to a bystander, and remark-

"Rather a valuable relic. This but-ton was shot from Hancock's coat at the battle of Gettysburg. My father was on Hancock's staff and picked up the buttom when it fell from the Gen-

"I should think that it is valuable," said the man, examining it. "From Hancock's coat? Well, I declare. What'll you take for it? Excuse me, sir. I should not have asked such a sil-It has been used with such wonderful success in all parts of the world in the treatment of these difficulties that it has come

"No offence, sir. I wouldn't sell the relic, of course, as it is bound to me by more than one tie. My father is dead" —and the man looked away while a boy that stood by the counter lazily turning the leaves of a lot of sheet music. "No, I wouldn't sell it," continued the man, "but as I am in straitened circumstances I am going to the pawn shop and pawn it."

"Don't do that. Let me take it."

"Well, loan me $5."

The money was handed over, and after the relic-man had carefully taken down the address of the capitalist he walked out. About five minutes after-ward the clerk in the neighboring store entered and exclaimed, "See here, fellers; I reckon I've got the boss relic, a button shot from Hancock's coat at the battle of Gettsyburg." He then unwrap-ped a lot of oil paper from around a

"Where did you get it?" asked the man who had a similar curiosity. "I got it from a man whose father picked it up just after a bullet had clipped it from Hancock's coat. The poor fellow had started to the pawn shop.

I let him have ten dollars on it.

from fear that Mr. Maynard will enter upon the policy of removing all who are not avowed Republicans. Under Gen. Key's administration quite a number of Democrats from the South have secured positions in the department, and the question now agitating them is will Mr. Maynard retain them notwithstanding their support of General Hancock Hancock.

Republican Bull-Dozing.

Montgomery, Ala., August 17.—A dastardly attempt was made in this city early this morning to murder Lafayette Thomas, a colored Democrat, by Horace Edwards, a colored Republican, because Thomas voted the Democratic ticket at the recent election. Thomas only saved his life by flight. Prince Smith, a colored Republican, was bound over to-day in the sum of $200 to await the action of the grand jury for attempting to prevent George Washington, a colored Democrat, from freely casting his ballet at the recent election held in this State.

Many more such cases are pending. MONTGOMERY, ALA., August 17 .- A

The Kind of Chaps who are Disappointed at Lendville.

Leadville Chronicle. Almost daily there arrive by all the various roads which lead into Leadville young men who have left home and friends, and with no experience or money to back them, come here to "make a living," as they call it. Poor, vain, deluded youths! Not that there is not ample work here for the willing, is not ample work here for the willing, not that those who come here fail to find employment—but, alas! it is not always that which causes the young men who a week before came here with hopes brightly burning, to return home dejected and discouraged. It is a fact, which has been proven again and again, that the majority of the vast army of young men came to Leadville in the delusion that a lax state of society prelusion that a lax state of society prevails here, which will enable them to live in a romantic sort of way without working. Mining! What a sense of novelty the word conveys to an adventurous Easterner. To lead the free and easy life of a miner, to steep in a log cabin, to work with a revolver strapped around your waist, to spend a couple of hours each day hunting among the mountains for elk and bear and deer; perchance go through an Indian fight-and all that sort of thing which is supposed to make up the life of a miner; what joyous scenes of excitement the word miner calls up! Alas, when the stern reality presents itself to the deluded mortal, what tumbling down of air castles is there, my countrymen, when the young man finds what in all the brief years of his existence—he has never found out, that it is work—and the hardest kind of work at that—which makes the money that makes the mare go.

The quick, active workers are those who make a success of it here. The first ease of a failure by one of those so rifted yet remains to be recorded. Hunt these mountains high and low and you can't find a worker who has failed in Leadville.

This is the class of people who, though they may not have more than what they have earned by hard labor when the week is past, see millions within their grasp, and who give you their solemn pledge that they will strike it three years hence. They are never discouraged, and take things just as they come, whether ill or good. Leadville is composed exclusively of a working class of people, in the practi-cal sense of the word. These mines about us are filled with clerks, professors, lawyers and doctors. Don't for a moment imagine that they are there as ornaments, receiving large salaries and doing nothing. No, indeed. In their rough miners' garb you would never take them for what they are. They are workers, even though their early years were spent in colleges, banks and offices. They dig and delve side by side with your common laborer, who understands neither Latin nor French, and know only one thing, and that is that they must work just as hard as their illiterate companions "to the manner born" if they expect to make the same wages.

These are the men who compose the active element which has just given Leadville its reputation for push and enterprise, and those who have not the means to build up a business here nor means to build up a business here nor wish to do some hard work had better

A Great Speech in Georgia.

A great speech has just been delivered in Georgia. A young Mr. Cox is running for Congress in an independent ning for Congress in an independent way in the fourth district. At a recent gathering of yeomen he declared his intentions in the following outburst:

If you see fit to send me to Congress I will go to the best of my ability. [Cheers.] I believe I would like to go. [Renewed cheers.] In fact, I know I want to go. [Loud cheers.] I have heard that the salary is ample, and, as I have a small family, won't insist on its increase. [Cheers.] As I am fond of vindication, I want to vindicate myself. It has been hurled at me-like a thunderbolt that I am too young. In answer to this I say, first, I can't help it, and it isn't my fault. Second, I am trying to grow older every day. Third, I am succeeding. Fourth, I am afraid I will be much older than I am before I get to Congress. [Prolonged applause.] get to Congress. [Prolonged applause.]

Too Many Visitors. New York Herald, 18th.

Visitors to General Hancock do not feel inclined, exactly, to confine themfeel inclined, exactly, to confine themselves to the days set apart for such visits—Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The result is that they continue to call, and although they are cordially received they seriously interfere with the general in the discharge of his official duties and compel him, in consequence, to protract his ordinary hours of labor. Most prominent among the visitors yesterday was G. S. Wright, president of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, of Paris, Texas, and the son "Less look for that feller," said the first victim. "Why, bust my buttons somebody must have drawn down on Hancock with a double-barrel shotgun."

The party went out, and the only information learned of him was that he had just cut the buttons from an old army coat and started for the next town.

The New Postmaster-General.

Washington, August 18.—It is expected that Mr. Horace Maynard will be here in time to take his seat in the cabinet meeting on Tuesday of next week, or if not then on the following Friday. Gen. Key is transacting as little business as possible of an important nature, deferring action until Mr. Maynard takes his seat in the cabinet as the new Postmaster-General. A good manual content in the property of the president of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, of Paris, Texas, and the son of Travis Wright, the pioneer hunter of Texas, who went there in 1816, and has lived there ever since. On receiving the large Texan delegation on Monday Gen. Hancock alluded to his hunting experiences with Travis Wright, the pioneer hunter of Texas, who went there in 1816, and has lived there ever since. On receiving the large Texan delegation on Monday Gen. Hancock alluded to his hunting experiences with Travis Wright, and, as may be imagined, he was glad to see the son of his old sporting companion and preceptor, and he recounted with great glee some lively anecdotes of their joint exploits with dog and gun on the Texas prairies. The other visitors were ex-Governor Lee, of Wyoming Territory; Gen. A. W. Adams, at one time in Gen. Custer's brigade; Jno.
Fullerton, of Philadelphia; and Miss Julia Colt, of Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Winslow's Seathing Syrup.

Rev. Sylvanus Cobb thus writes in the Boston Christian Freeman:—We would by no means recommend any kind of medicine which we did not know to be good—particularly for infants. But of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup we can speak from knowledge; in our own family it has proved a blessing indeed, by giving an infant troubled with colic pains, quiet sleep, and its parents unknown rest at night. Most parents can appreciate these blessings. Here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the sleep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." And during the process of teething, its value is incalculable. We have frequently heard mothers say they would not be without it from the birth of the child till it had finished with the teething sleeg, on any consideration whatever.
