With the chills and fever, the victim of malaria with the chills and fever, the victim of malaria may still recover by using this celebrated specific, which not only breaks up the most aggravated attacks, but prevents their recurrence. It is infinitely preferable to quinine. not only because it does the business far more thoroughly, but also on account of its perfect wholesomeness and invigoraing action upon the entire system.

iMacon, Ga., March 31, 1879.

From having been intimate for a number of years with the proprietors of Swift's Syphilitic Specific, I have known much of its manufacture and its use. There are men in the community—well known ettizens—who were victims in early life to Syphillis, the most terrible curse that ever afflicted the human family, and who have taken the S. S. medicine, and are now, to all appearances, and in their own belief, as free from the taint disease as the first man, fresh from the hands of his Maker. Delicacy of course forbids their public recommendations of this medicine, but I am allowed refer to the skeptic privately to those who will endorse everything that can be said in its faver. Being professionally much opposed to endorsing or recommending nostrums or secret remedies, it is with hesitation that I attach my name to this article; but I know whereof I speak when I say that our science has not yet made public a combination equal to this for the purpose indicated. The greatest boon the government could bestow on hundreds of thousands of its citizens would be to purchase this receipt of its proprietors, and make it public for the benefit of the present and all coming generations.

The self-reliant Democrats who vote as they think right must smile with contempt, of course, to hear it used as an argument that either "the South" or 'the North" is with or against their opinions. But there are weak mortals who may be deterred perhaps, from giv-iving effect to their real sentiments, by the fear or the feeling that in so doing they will be going against their own part of the country. Senator Conkling's whole speech on Friday night was addressed to such persons. To them we commend the following table of the Democratic votes cast at the last Presidential election:

Weaver a Republican.

Baltimore Svi.

It has come to be an open secret that during the recent visit here of General Weaver, the greenback candidate for the presidency, he was in secret consultation for some hours with the chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee, as he was known to be on one or two other previous occasions when in Washington, General Weaver's whole course since the Alabama election could not have been more cunningly devised in the interest of the republican candidates if, as all leged very freely, arrangements to that effect were made in his interviews with the same as a matter of course.

THREE HAPPY SISTERS.

Reunited After & Separation of Thirty Years.

Louisville Courier-Journal. The happiest household in the city of Louisville is that which nightly gathers about the lamp-light at the residence of Mr. F. P. Baron, the well-known stoye merchant, who lives on Green street, near Wenzel. Mr. Baron's estimable wife and her two sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Cross, of Sacramento, Cal., and Mrs. Hettie Lowe, of Iowa, are reunited after a separation of nearly thirty years, under circumstances so romantic and unusual that few chapters in fiction are as entertaining. The three ladies, are of English parentage. About forty years ago their father, Mr. Joseph Powell, of London, England, accompanied by his wife and children, sailed for Trinidad, in Brazil. Mr. Powell was wealthy, and had made purchases of land in Trinidad from agents. The children were small when the voyage began. It lasted four months in a sailing vessel, and consequently they can still remember it. On reaching Trini-dad Mr. Powell discovered that it was impossible for an unacclimated foreigner to live there. Disease was ravaging the island, and further, he discovered that in the purchase of the land he had been swindled out of a large sum. They did not dise nbark, but came on to the United States with the remainder of The family were left almost penniless, strangers in a strange land. Mrs. Powell pined away and died of a broken heart one month after her husband's death. This great misfortune left four little girls and a boy at the mercy of the world. The eldest was seven years old, who is now Mrs. Baron. The children secured homes with kindly people, and for two or three years saw each other frequently. Then came separation. Mrs. Baron remained in Illinois, Mrs. Lowe went to Iowa and Mrs. Cross to California. The other brother and sister died soon afterward in Springfield, Ill. The separation took place in 1852, and Mrs. Cross, then a child of nine or ten years, accompanied her protector to California, where the gold feuer was raging. They made the passage of the plains in wagon trains, and were attacked by Indians, narrowly escaping annihilation of the party. Her friends went to the mines, and the little girl grew up in the magic changes and romantic surroundings of the gold mines. The children lost sight of each other, but did not forget. Years passed, and the girls grew up to be intelligent and educated young ladies. They married, and all married well. Then they ried, and all married well. Then they began to yearn for each other, and after many attempts discovered where each other lived, and a correspondence began. With household duties and their children to occupy them they could not ject of so many newspaper articles. The meet, on account of the distance which separated them. Then both came to Louisville, The new Danish minister to Wash- and several days ago the three longington, J. Hagerman Lindercrone, has separated sisters were reunited happily. A happier group could not well be imagined. They are all respected people, occupying high estimation with their acquaintances. There are romantic threads underlying this brief outline, which deserve fuller relation, and Mrs. Cross, it is understood, is going to write the history of the eventful lives of the

rible if True. Washington, September 22.—The Treasury Department was in receipt of a communication some time since from the chief of the detective corps of San Francisco, containing statements which read like a highly wrought up romance, embracing the crimes of murder, rob-bery and marital infidelity. The story in brief is as follows: Two gentlemen, friends of each other, with their wives, were traveling in California. One of them had in his possession a number of registered United States bonds. The sight of the bonds excited the cupidity of his friend, who also coveted his neighbor's wife. The two men walked out together one afternoon to view the mountain scenery. The owner of the bonds was never seen again, and his companion reported that he had accidentally tumbled down a frightful pre-cipice. Subsequently, while in the recesses of a vast forest, the man tied his own wife and burned her to death. Then, in company with the wife of the missing man, he made his way back to San Francisco, and with her connivance personated the owner of the bonds and endeavored to negotiate the sale of them. The two were shadowed and found to be living as man and wife, the man assuming the name of the friend whom he was believed to have murdered. Such is the outline of the detective's story, and as may be readily imagined the treasury officials were on imagined the treasury officials were on the qui vive for any application for which might come for the transfer of the bonds to another party. Nothing was heard until quite recently, when a letter was received from the attorneys of a lady living in Kansas City, asking the transfer of the bonds to her name. The lady states that the is the widow of the person in that she is the widow of the person in whose name the bonds now stand registered. An account is then given of his murder, or supposed murder, by the false friend, whom, it is stated, obtained possession of the bonds, but there is nothing to indicate that she was an ac-

Weaver's whole course since the Alabama election could not have been more cunningly devised in the interest of the republican candidates if, as alleged very freely, arrangements to that effect were made in his interviews with Mr. Hubbell. The bolt from the green-backers' convention in Maire vesterday was undoubtedly due to his efforts, but the insignificance of it shows that his influence is not near so great as the republican managers have been led to expect.

Bon Cameron's Political Economy.

Senator Don Cameron has been on a fiving visit to Washington to look after his new house on Massachusetts avenue and consult as to the political situation. He says, as a matter of course, that Pennsylvania is all right for the Republican candidates. There has been some talk of the Republicans sending speakers and money into several of the so-called doubtful States of the South, but Don says he is opposed to anything of the kind, as he considers it would be of no use.

Lady Fox Hunters.

This county is famous for its country gentlemen of the good old style who have their hounds and studs of blooded horses, and rosy cheeked girls in the wildest of the chase. We attended a blooming lassie to the train to-day for St. Mary's school in Raleigh who has been in at the tailing of many a fox and can ride a hurdle and leap a rail fence as easily as the ballest himself. as easily as the boldest hunter. Miss Fisher, the distinguished authoress, was in the chase with some of our young ladies last summer, a young and handsome French Count was also along, dressed in old English style, with little breeches that took him to the knees, with small cap and hunting jacket and his horn swung to his back. He rode well and they enjoyed the chase. They were hunting, we think, with Major Hairston who lives near the line in Stokes and is a great patron of the sport; he has hurdle races on the grounds and allows the young men who visit him to train his blooded colts to jump. Miss Fisher met with an accident on that hunt. There were three great mudholes in the road and as they dashed she saw but one, which she cleared at a bound, but the horse landed in the other and the great jar shook her off, but fortunately without hurt. Tom Carter laughed and told her she was experiencing the fox hunt that she wrote so beautifully of in "Bonnie Kate." Happy times the young people, his shattered fortune. He went to Peoria, Ill., and settled there, investing all his means in property. He was swindled again, and to crown the misfortune of the family the father fell ill and died four months after arriving.

Kate." Happy times the young people, and old, too, have at Major Hairston's. The girls go over from this county, and he has all for the saddle before day; the horns wind merrily, and off they dash through wood and glen, whipping the dew drops from the leaves, and the dew never opens a fairer flower than a young maiden's eyes in a fox hunt.

> One of General Grant's Sons Marries an Heiress.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 22.-Jesse Grant, third son of General U.S. Grant. and Miss Lizzie Chapman, daughter of W. S. Chapman, of San Francisco, were married in the Palace Hotel in this city at 9 o'clock last night. There was no great display, although the apartment in which the nuptial knot was tied was handsomely decorated with flowers. The company present was selected. Among the most noted were Ulysses S. Grant. Jr., Ex-Senator and Mrs. Cole, Senator and Miss Sharon, Mr. and Mrs. Dent and H. H. Honore. General and Mrs. Grant sent a congratulatory dispatch. The bride entered on the arm of John E. Mason, her brother-in-law, and was followed by Mr. Grant with Mrs. Chapman. There were no brides-maids. The Rev. Dr. Stebbins performed the ceremony under the floral wedding bell. The supper room was thrown open at 10 o'clock. The presents received by the bride were numerous and some wealth of the slightest light brown hair
