A FIENDISH CRIME.

A Case which Recalls the Sad Story of

The particulars of an atrocious crime

A letter was written in the Cafe St.

When they arrived on the downs the

The Czar and Princess Delgorouka.

A St. Petersburg letter says:

The event of which every one here is reasons that do not need explaining, the marriage of the emperor with announcing the celebration of the tho' it may come true any day.

in a recent letter addressed to one of the ambitious passions of the woman and inevitable. The marriage will as soon as the czar lays aside his children born to the emperor by this princess will receive the of Russia precisely the same place the legitimized children of Louis XIV will take rank after the grand dukes.

The haughty princess must perforce of the czar has no other course to do. The ceremony itself will be private, almost secret. Apropos of this union, a statement has been printed that the princess has had five children by Alexander. In fact, she has four. The error is due to a mistake in counting the children as the late King Vittorio Emanuel, the galantissimo. The czar is indeed a Louis XVI, who wants to play Louis XIV, under the charms of a worn out

Maintenant.

This marriage with the woman has the credit of inspiring all the reactionary and anti-liberal measures of the czar's government, does not tend to hasten the work of pacification.

BLAINE ON GRANT.

He thinks the ex-President made a

Blaine on Grant.

He thinks the ex-President made a Mistake in attacking Hancock.

After his speech at Warsaw, Ind.,

Senator Blaine was asked what he gave the remarks made by General Grant in his interview with Fowler. He was rather undecided.

He hardly thought the ex-President would say what the newspapers claimed he did say. He thought Hancock's record as a soldier was beyond criticism, and that Grant would be very foolish to scrape up personal ill-feeling. He did not see where either party would be benefited by such a squabble.

When asked if in his opinion

Grant was jealous of Hancock he said he might be, but for his part he saw no reason why

Grant should be. Grant had all the honor which the people could bestow upon him and should be satisfied. The senator thought

Hancock wise for taking the attack so coolly. He believed the truth comes out, if it has not already, that the matter would be dropped after a few complimentary letters had been exchanged.

He Had Misgivings.

Burlington Hawkers.

"I had my misgivings, boss," the waiter said to the landlord, who was questioning him about his conduct toward the tall gentleman in blue clothes who sat at the third table from the door, "I had my suspicions when he asked if he was carryin' moah whisky, but he was good for him, but he was puffed
