A FATAL GUN-SHOT.

Tragedy in Which an Ex-Senator of Georgia Louses His Life at the Muzzle of a Shot-Gun-Full Particulars of the Sad Affair. Albany News and Advertiser.

Early yesterday morning news reached the city that ex-Senator I. P. Tison had been shot and killed by Mr. John P. Callaway, at Leesburg, the night before. Various and conflicting rumors were in circulation concerning the af-fair, and in order to get full and relia-ble information the News and Adver-tiser dispatched a reporter to Leesburg for the purpose of visiting the scene of the tragedy and gathering all the par-three stores in the place. It seems that Mr. Tison was greatly under the in-fluence of liquor on Wendesday night, and went to the store of Mr. Callaway and raised a disturbance, shooting off his pistol in the house and making him-self disagreeable generally. Mr. Calla-way was not in the store at the time, but way was not in the store at the time, but was attending a political meeting at the court house. Being unable to quiet Mr. Tison, and fearing trouble, Mr. T. J. Mason, the clerk in the store, sent for Mr. Callaway, who soon arrived. When he reached his store, however, Mr. Tison had left having gone over to what had transpired during his absence Mr. Callaway went over to where Mr. Tison was, and asked the latter what he meant by shooting off his pistol and raising such a disturbance in his store. Mr. Tison made no apology or satisfactory explanation of his conduct, but asked Mr. Callaway what he proposed to do about it. As to what followed right here there is a conflict in the statements that are made. It is said by one of the witnesses that Mr. Callaway started to draw his pistol, when Mr. when the latter retreated. Another and, seeming to wink at the reporters,

Not being satisfied with great cheering. At the close of the this, he went or sent to his son's store love feast Mr. Beecher obtained a vote and got a Henry rifle, and with this of thanks for Ingersoll and Ingersoll fired one or two balls through the door. got three cheers for Beecher. There are also marks on the door which show that the muzzle of the gun must have been thrust against it with great

Mr. James Salter, an intimate friend of Mr. Tison's, and the sheriff of the county, was sent for, and when he arrived at the place found Mr. Tison pounding on the door. Mr. Salter at once took hold of him and tried to lead him away, but what followed shows said to have written the famous "Chitliat he did not succeed. Just here we nese letter." are met by conflicting statements again. Mr. Salter, assisted by some one else, it seems, got Mr. Tison away from the front door. The front door of the store opens on the street on the west side of the railroad, and the back door the front door. The front door of the store opens on the street on the west side of the railroad, and the back door opens into a cotton patch which surrounds the rear. The next that we hear of Mr. Tison he was led away from the front door, he is pushing rails off the fence and making his way to the rear door. He evidently thought that Callaway was still in the store, as did also Mr. Salter and the other friends who were with him, but it seems that Callaway had passed out through the back door, and was either in the fence corner about ten or fifteen yards from CLARA S. MOREY.

Callaway had passed out through the back door, and was either in the fence corner about ten or fifteen yards from the rear of the house, or just over the fence in his yard.

In approaching the rear door from the point where he crossed the fence, Tison was also advancing towards where Callaway, or whoever atal shot, was start.

It appears that Mr. Salter and another man had hold of Mr. Tison when he was shot, and that one or two others were near by, Mr. Ed. Floyd, one of Mr. Tison's clerks, being near enough to receive a shot in his hat. One report says that it was Mr. John Haines, one of Mr. Tison's clerks, who had hold of him with Mr. Salter, and another says that it was Mr. Tison's son. Be this as it may, Mr. Tison's son. Be this as it may, Mr. Tison had approached within a few feet of the back door, when a gun fired from the position already pointed out. Mr. Tison staggered back and said: "Boys, he has killed me." These were his last words. Those who had hold of him eased him to the ground, and he was a dead man in a few minutes. few minutes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 .- The Female clerks in almost all the government departs, literally hold the fort just new.

There never before has been such a clearing out of the male clerks to go home and vote. The strengus efforts made by the Republican campaign committee to send every Republican committee to send every Republican voter in Washington home in time for the election engenders the suspicion that there is not that confidence in Garfield's election which it might naturally be supposed was felt from the boastings which have been indulged in. BEECHER AND INGERSOLL

The Good Things They Said of Each Other at a Republican Rally.

When Robt. Ingersoll walked down the stage he was followed by the Rev. Justin D. Fulton, and in time to start a second round of applause came Henry Ward Beecher. Albert Daggett was called upon to preside, but he gave way to Henry Ward Beecher, who said: "The man who is to speak to us tonight is not to speak in a conventicle or church, but he is one who has done valuable things for the right without va-riableness or shadow of turning. In the name of common humanity and true faith and true liberty I give him Mr. Tison had left, having gone over to his son's store on the opposite side of the street and railroad. Upon learning took his hand and both bowed, while the street and railroad. the audience applauded the tableau Then Mr. Beecher said that Mr. Inger-soll was the most brilliant speaker of the English tongue in any land on the globe. As underneath the brilliancy of the flame were solid coals of fire, so underneath the lambent fire of his wit there were imperishable living coals of soundest truth. Mr. Robert Ingersoll felt awkward, apparently, at such a gushing stream of praise from the Plymouth pastor and as he arose he seemed to meditate Tison, with more dexterity, drew his revenge. Arthur Fitzpatrick, who returned from Colorado a short time ago, gives the following glowing account of an occurence in the mining districts, of which he was an are witness. which he was an eye-witness: "A miner and some companions were crossing the Continental Divide when it was ing the Continental Divide when it was covered with snow. Three miles below them, down a decline of forty-five degrees, deeply covered with frozen snow, lay the spot they desired to reach, while to go round by rail was fifteen miles. The miner took a tin pan used for washing gold, spread his blanket over it, got in himself in a squatting position on his haunches, tucked the blanket around, held his rifle and other traps over his head and got one of his comover his head and got one of his companions to give him a push. He im formed me that he went down at the speed of sixty miles a minute, and shot far out into the valley at the foot of the mountain. When he stopped he found the soldering of the pan melted from friction, his blanket on fire, and it was his impression that had he gone much further he would have been burned up, together with all his traps."
