YOUNG MEN! The best PRACTICAL. Moore's Business University,

An old Story.

Fisherman John is brave and strong None more brave on the coast than he; te owns a cottage and fishing smack As snug as ever need be.

Often and often, when day is done,
With smiling lips and eager eyes
He comes to woo me; in every way
That a man may try he tries
To win me; but that he can never do,
Though he woo me till he dies. Fisherman Jack is a poorer man; He owns no cottage nor fishing amack, But a winning voice and smile are his,

And a manij grace. Alack!
It w.li not break my heart to tell
That I love Fisherman Jack. He loves not me; but every night
He sits at the feet of Kate Mahon,
Never a heart has she for him—
For she loves Fisherman Jehn,
Who cares no more for love of hers
Than the sea he sails upon.

Often we wonder, de Kate and I,
That fate should cross us so cruelly,
We think of the lovers we do not leve
And dream of what life would be,
If only Fisherman John loved her,
And Fisherman Jack loved me.

A MAN IN THE BED.

Blood-Curdling Episode That Start led a Texas Co Waco, Texas, Examiner.

A lady residing on Fourth street, and who had been temporarily left at home by her husband, who was away from town on a business trip, was shocked on going into her room an evening or two since to discover what appeared to be a man stretched prone upon her bed, with the cover drawn close about him. Her first impulse was to flee, screaming, from the room, but a second thought came, and with it nerve enough to put the thought into execution. The lady stepped noiselessly into an adjoining room and armed herself with a club. She returned with it and touched the object of her fright. There was no sign of life. She touched it again, and still harder, but still the object did not move. She now thought the man was sleeping. And a third thought came. Hurrying into another room she procured a bottle of chloroform, saturated a cloth with the drowsy drug, crept back to the bedside and spread the cloth over the sleeping man's face. When it had been there a minute or two she knew her foe was vanquished. She now ran out and told her neighbors of what had occurred. Men armed themselves with guns and sticks and marched in solid phalanx to where the clothes were carefully removed and the object beneath them was plainly revealed to sight. It proved to be nothing more than a stuffed dummy with a false face upon it. The lady's young son had fixed it up, thinking to give his mother a scare. She didn't scare, though, worth a cent, and her brave conduct has made her the heroine of the neighborhood. We have told this story just as it was told to us

New York Press Views.

majority. Too Cold for Suicide.

A Paris dispatch to the London Telegraph says: "An amusing instance of premeditated, but unaccomplished, suicide occurred last night on the Quai d'Orsay. A man sixty years of age, having become tired of life, approached the river with intention of drowing himself. He took off his clothes and throw them into the firer. The reldthrew them into the river. The coldness of the water, however, when it reached his waist was more than he could bear. He quickly regained the bank and gave up all idea of committing suicide. His position, however, was an unpleasant one, as he had nothing on and had thrown his clothes away. He therefore ran into a neighboring tavern, borrowed some garments, and was duly handed over to the commissary of the police."

basis of our national specie, and the strength and stability and beauty of the wood that supports it the strength and symmetry of our institutions? I believe it is said that the patriarch Jacob worshipped leaning on the top of his staff. Our institutions are safe so long as our people and government are found leaning on the staff of solid worth and of public and private virtue. I accept this all the more gladly because it comes across one of the lines that divide us religiously. For in our country a man may adopt whatever religion he chooses, or no religion if he prefers.
