TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1880.

An Ohio Congressman is named H.L. Morey. That hits him off exactly.

Hayes is a good deal like Arthur, only he has the manners.

THE DUTY OF THE SOUTH.

The Baltimore Gazette truly says:

"Democratic principles must command the confidence of the country as long as the Union lasts, and the election of November 2d only proves an educational and important reason why their practical application should not only for Indian abuse and political corruption, but also for the equalization of taxation and the suppression of lawlessness. Let the Democrats of the South, then, take the lead in the work of reform, and they cannot fail to receive the support of the country. To discriminate against the Southern States in the matter of taxation, as has been done for years, is not only unjust, but unwise, and the Democrats of the South should not only demand the repeal of the unjust discrimination, but they should also demand that the money collected from the people of the South should be expended in the South, and not in the North, as has been the case for years. The Democrats of the South have the power to right the wrongs of which they complain, and they should not hesitate to use it. Let them begin the work of reform at once, and they will receive the support of the Democrats of the whole country."

The Baltimore Gazette gives the following opinion as to the duty of the South, which we may say is "too precious":

"What, then, is the duty of the South? Throw on the Democratic party by the new census the responsibility of framing the tariff bills of the next Congress? Allow the Democratic party to be overwhelmed by the Republican majority in the House of Representatives? Permit the Democratic party to be overwhelmed by the Republican majority in the Senate? Or shall the Democrats of the South, by their votes and influence, secure the election of Democratic Congressmen who will be able to defeat the Republican majority in the House of Representatives, and thus enable the Democratic party to control the legislation of the country? The Democrats of the South have the power to do this, and they should have had more regard for their responsibilities in the premises. Democratic success in the South is not only necessary to the success of the Democratic party in the country, but it is necessary to the South itself. The Democrats of the South have the power to secure the election of Democratic Congressmen who will be able to defeat the Republican majority in the House of Representatives, and thus enable the Democratic party to control the legislation of the country.
