The diphtheria is assuming an epi-demic form in Brooklyn, and the New York Herald states that in some parts of the city the mortality is as great as it was in Memphis during the yellow fever pestilence. The Herald says the blame rests upon those who rule Brooklyn, who have neglected proper sanitary precaution against the disease.

What He Has to Say of the Situation. A correspondent of the Philadelphia discernible, is that the Legislature is chained to be in a condition to be manipulated against Senator Bayard.

There are some enthusiastic individuals als here who claim that there is a strong als here who claim that there is a strong anti-Bayard feeling among certain of the Democrats elected to the Legislature, and that the seven Republicans held the balance of nower. The idea is that a conjunction of these two alleged hostile interests can and may defeat Senator Bayard for re-election. This ealculation is evidently the outgrowth of a most wivid imagination, for there is no apparent probability that Senator Bayard will have any difficulty to be elected his own successor. conty to be elected his own successor.

It is a good thing for the country that this is true. In no event could a Republican be elected Senator Bayard's Regulate that expan, not by taking doses, but by successor, and of all the Democrata in the State he is the broadest and best; indeed, he spreads himself over the country, and for purity of character and mental force is not excelled in his party anywhere. He is always found compating the meaner methods of the character any where. He is always found combating the meaner methods of the Democratic management, and no man whom I know of has the courage to say stronger things inside the party councils against dangerous or impolitic schemes than Thomas F. Bayard. If he would sometimes step outside of the party traces and vote against the meas- uncertainty that the meas- the would sometimes and has denough the meas- thousand the meas- the courage to the party traces and vote against the meas- the courage to the party traces and vote against the meas- th he would sometimes step outside of the party traces and vote against the measures which he abhors, and has denounced in caucus, he would be a statesman without a peer in effective service to his party and his country. As Delaware is bound, then, to have a Democrat, it is best that this man, who can hill the place, should have it, rather than some so-called independent Democrat, who usually turns out to be the meanest partisan, and almost uni-

of the Senate made this State an inviting field for experiment, especially as the territory to be covered was limited and the points to be operated on con-

"Shall you be re-elected?"
"I should think so, although that is a matter about which I give myself very dittle concern. I do not know, except in a general way, about the composi-tion of the Legislature, and I have never made it a point to meet the members of the Legislature with a view to my personal advancement. The election of a Senator should not be the result of personal solicitation."

"What of the future of the Demo cratic party?" "The Democratic party is the defense of the constitution. Its principles are right, and have survived many more disastrous defeats than this. It may be chastened by accidents, mismanagement or the use of bad methods in political warfare, and I confess that I can-not justify much of what has been done on both sides during the recent contests. But the Democratic party will outlive all this, for principles do not die."

"Are we to have a cessation of politi-cal excitement during the coming four years?" "Who can tell? I thought when the nominations were made this time that we would have a quiet canvass, which would not greatly disturb the country. But it has been the bitterest campaign I ever saw, and after these evidences I am at a loss to know what may not be done in the near future by politicians, who seem to care more for party success or for the loaves and fishes than for the good of the country. If Grant had been nominated I should have expected just such a canvass as we have had, but with the two candidates who were running I must say that I was not prepared for any such exhibition of feeling."

"Will there be any effort to nullify the result by challenging the electoral vote of New York?"

"Oh, no! oh no! There will never again be any straining of constitutional methods in the decision of a presidential election. Things are profligate enough in New York, but I should as soon think of my voting to confirm any such action, if it should be taken, as to think that any serious attempt would be made to interfere with the count ing the vote of New York for Garfield as it has been cast. The election has been held and the verdict of the people recorded, and the Democratic party will never tolerate any tampering with the will of the people. Garfield will be inaugurated without opposi-

"About the organization of the next

"That is one of the unpleasant results of the campaign. The division of parties is so narrow that it gives small men a chance for barter, and offers a temptation for such political maneuvers as I have no taste for. It would have been better if the majority on one side or the other had been marked enough to prevent any political leger-demain in the organization by either demain in the organization by either party or by free lances."

"Is there any probability of an effort being made to unseat Kellogg?"

"I should hope not, and yet the incentive to retain control of the Senate may result in the continued agitation of this question, which can only provoke bad feeling. Of course there is but one position for me. There must be some finality to legislative action, and that point has been reached in and that point has been reached in Kellogg's case. It is res adjudicata. It is always best that there shall be no temptation to strain a point in the hope of gaining a passing advantage."

"Then you expect the coming session of the Senate to be an interesting "Naturally so. It being the close of one administration and the beginning of a new one, there will necessarily be more of interest than there usually is in an ordinary session.' Senator Bayard spoke kindly of Gen. Garfield, and expressed the hope that his administration might justify the most sanguine expectation of his friends, Senator David Davis Wants to be a Judge Again.

Special Dispatch to the Baltimore Sun. WASHINGTON, Nov. 15,-A report is current, but not much credited, that Senator David Davis has tired of sena-torial honors, and wishes to remount the bench. The report is to the effect that he will resign his senatorship if reappointed to the bench. If such an arrangement could be carried out it would give the Republicans control of the Senate, as Davis uniformly voted with A correspondent of the Philadelphia the Democrats, and his successor would be a Republican. It locks now as if Gen. Garfield would have four Supreme Court vacancies at his disposal during the late election in this State, as far as dispersible is that the Legislature is
