It is undoubtedly true, as Gov. Jarvis said in his message to the General Assembly, that the great need of public schools of to-day is the money with which to pay teachers and build school houses, and yet the system by which the schools in North Carolina are conimprovement with the amount of means likely to be available for their support.

The general impression is that the public schools of many of the Northern States, and especially the New England States, are resting as a satisfactory basis. This is not entirely true. A late writer undertakes to describe the public schools of a model New England village in which they are looked upon as the chief boast of the people. There are primary, higher primary, lower intermediate, grammer and high schools. There are free high schools in which instruction is given in Greek, Latin French, mathematics, physiology, natuliterature, history, geology, chemistry, physics, botany and civil government. Yet the writer says that these schools are to a great degree unpractical, super-ficial and, to some extent at least, adapt-course that is open to North Carolina. She could not, if she would, extend to her children the advantages of what is called a liberal education. They would be satisfied for the present at least, with a few loaves and small fishes, provided these can be distributed so as to Today has been set apart by the committee on education and labor of the House of Representatives for action on the education bill which passed the Senate before the adjournment for the holidays. It has attracted wide-spread attention, and there is a good prospect for its passage. The amount to be divided under the provisions of this bill is small at first, but increases at a rapid 'rate, being $60,000 the first year, $120,-000 the second, $180,000 the third, and 80 on.

He believed that a 3 per cent. rate could be safely established and was confident of a speedy negotiation of every bond

> Stevenson, of Illinois, opposed the bill on the ground that it did no more than fix a permanent national debt upon the country.

Weaver, of Iowa, protested against refunding 5 and 6 per cents into anything that would take from the government the right of redemption for a single day or hour. McMillan, of Tennessee, argued in favor of the amendment which he proposed to offer, making the bonds subect to taxation. Dunnell, of Minnesota, member of the committee of ways and means, said that he has no doubt that a three per cent. bond would find a ready sale, and he advocated that rate of interest. He would vote, however, for a reduction of the time from 20 to 10 years. O Turner, of Kentucky, opposed the refunding theory. He was in favor of
