GOV. JARVIS'S INAUGURAL AD-DRESS.

There is the ring of an honest, sincere desire for the advancement of North Carolina's interests, for the prosperity and happiness of her people, in the inaugural address of Gov. Jarvis which appears in full elsewhere. The Governor offers and responds in admirable spirit to the sentiment: "North Carolina, the development of her resources and the education of her children." No new and startling facts are stated; no elaborate theories are advanced showing how the end so ardentdesired is to be accomplished. Plain truths are stated and no effort is made at a concealment of the relative position of our State in the general line of advancement; the remainder of the work is left to our legislators upondevolves the duty of providing the ways and means to stimulate our growth and happiness. If he succeed in sending out the laborers into the, fields which are so white for the harvest, he will the limited powers now delegated to reforms or inaugurate new systems of tion. improvement except by giving them such personal aid and encouragement pointed out in his inaugural address the instruments by which the people of the State may be rendered prosperous and thousand dollars. happy; it now remains for others to apply them.

The three per cent. funding bill has passed the House, but the indications are that the rate of interest will be raised to three and a half per cent. Senator Blaine says this will be done. He further says: The fact that British consels, which are perpetual and have never been at par, although backed by a government which has the highest credit of any in the world, furnishes the most conclusive evidence that a 3 per cent. bond to run only for a short term of years cannot be floated at par. To undertake it would inevitably

With each successive meeting of the General Assembly, some legislator, wishing perhaps to obtain credit for a generous, magnanimous spirit, or ready to condons a public wrong because it did not happen to inflict a personal injury, asks the Legislature to restore to the full rights of citizenship a man whom the General Assembly kicked out of office for grossly violating the laws of the State and insulting and maltreating her citizens. Even those who were the special objects of this abuse cheriah to-day little ill-will toward W. W. Holden, for time softens every asperity, but it would be little short of stultification for the same department of the State government which deposed and disfranchised him to nullify this action. There is nothing in Gov. Holden's condition to arouse sympathy or demand such extraordinary leniency. He holds to-day one of the most lucrative Federal offices in the State.

It is thought now in Washington that the Freedman's Bank will pay another dividend of ten per cent. from whom the Governor rightly assumes the $250,000 to be realized from the sale of the property in Washington now occupied by the department of Jusice, if the House passes the bill passed by the Senate. If this is accomplished it will bring up the total divihave accomplished a great work. WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.-SENATE .-The ladies' gallery was largely occupied at the hour of meeting by members of the National Women's Suffrage Association now in session in Washington. The Vice-President submitted a communication from the State department relating to the offer to sell to the department the original manuscripts and historical papers bequeathed by Benja-min Franklin to his grandson, William Temple Franklin, the same being a collection of Henry Stevens Franklin. Among the papers is the original petition of the Continental Congress to George III., in 1774, signed by the delegates. The collection will be offered for sale in London for £7,000 sterling, if the offer to this government is not accepted. The communication was referred to the committee on library and ordered to be printed. On motion of McDonald, his resolution, introduced in February, 1880, for the creation of a standing committee of five Senators to receive, consider and report upon all petitions and bills relating to the rights of women as citizens of the United States, and to be called "Committee on the Rights of Women Citizens," was taken up.

Davis, of West Virginia, said the rules required that proposition to go to the committee on rules, and he moved to refer the resolution to that committee. Agreed to-aves 26, noes

The funding bill was received from the House and referred to the committee on finance. The regular order being the bill to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, was taken up and occu-the remainder of the day. Coke, who reported the bill, explained its provisions, and there was quite a long debate thereon, in which Coke, Teller, Butler, Morgan, Hill, Saunders, and others participated without action on the bill. The Senate at 4.15 went into executive session, and when the doors were re-opened adjourned.

HOUSE .- Calkins, of Indiana, stated that he would not call up the contested election case of Boynton vs. Loring, but would yield to the committee on approhaving been dispensed with, the House, at 12.30, went into committee of the whole, Cox, of New York, in the chair, be to lower the public credit, which now stands so high. Mr. Blaine said he thought also that it would bear very hard on a large class of investors to insist upon a 3 per cent. rate. Trustees of widows and orphans and of educational and benevolent institutions are compelled to a large extent to invest in government bonds, and a difference of one per cent. makes a vast difference to them.

This is no doubt the popular side. But it is rather a narrow view which requires the national finances to be managed for the benefit of a comparatively small investment made by trustees and other managers of funds of educational institutions. After all, it appears to us that the only question is whether or not the government will be successful in fleating a 3 per cent. bond. The Financial Chronicle, the leading authority on matters of this sort in this country, to which Hon. Fernando Wood referred in his speech in the House of Representatives, day before yesterday, says there is "very good prospect for the negotiation of the loan in its present shape," and adds: "So far as Well street is concerned, the dis-position is to took favorably on the bill and to discount its passage and the successful negotiations of the bonds."

But, wouldn't the country at large, and particularly the South, be better off if less money is locked up in bonds of this sort? Wouldn't it be better if capital should seek investment in schemes and enterprises which tend to develope her resources?

OProfessor Summer has a paper in this month's Princeton Review on "Presidential elections and civil service reform," in which he takes the ground that the recurrence of presidential elections every four years is a chief obstacle to reform in the civil service. He apparently favors an increase in the powers of the popular branch of Congress and the taking from the President of the power of appointment to office and the veto. "If, then," he says, "this change should be brought about, the presidency would become more of an ornamental office; its power would be lessened ; the chiefs of the departments would become a true cabinet; the President might, without any reason to the contrary, be elected for a much lenger term; it would no longer make no difference if he had no qualifles not possessed by respectable mediocrity, and the functions of the political worker would lose importance. This proposition might equally well be stated in anothen form: We can lengthen the term of the presidential office if we strip it of the most important powers which it now possesses to centrol legislation, and we can then solve the problem of civil service reform." These suggestions are decidedly radical in their nature, and yet they do not leave the, second, Flit, third. time, 1.491% and
