A Corner in Eggs.

If, as is reported, there is a corner in eggs, the hens have been most improp-erly and unjustifiably abused. They have been accused of withholding their supplies on account of the cold, the snow and the deficiency of gravet, whereas the actual case seems to be that speculators have been engaged in buying up eggs in every part of the in-terior with the view to make them scarce and higher-priced The results have been disastrous to the pudding interests, and have compelled proprieinterests, and have compelled proprietors of hotels and restaurants to look with suspicion upon every one who desires to be served with boiled eggs for breakfast or ham and eggs at luncheon. The annual consumption of eggs in this country is estimated to be 1,000,000,000, which would give 20 per annum to each inhabitant of the country. Those who look upon eggs as an indispensable part of breakfast may console themselves with the reflection that Easthemselves with the reflection that Easter is rapidly approaching—a season when hens must lay eggs, whether dyed
