"Who is that?" I asked of a gentleman sitting by me.

"That is Richardson of Mississippi—the largest cotton planter in the world."

"In the world?"

"Yes, sir. The ex-Khedive of Egypt,

"Yes, sir. The ex-Khedive of Egypt, it is said, had a larger cotton crop than Richardson—but he has since then gathered the largest crop of cotton ever planted by one man,"

"What does his crop amount to?"

"It reached one year over 12,500 bales. He operates a large number of plantations and has a small army of laborers under his control. He works State under his control. He works State convicts largely, and finds their labor, of course, highly profitable."

"I have heard, though, that his planting was really the smallest part of his

"That is a pretty rough thing to say, when his cotton crop alone brings nearly a million a year, and yet I suppose it is true. He is not only the largest planter, but is the largest manufactur-er in the South. He owns a cotton factory that is the largest in the South, except the Eagle and Phoenix. He told me that the gross business of this fac tery alone was $1,600,000 in one year, and was very profitable. If I am not and was very profitable. If I am not often did, without supports and with-mistaken he said that he once cleared out the meed of renown, the highest 37 per cent. per annum on the money invested in his cotton factory. Besides this, he has three or four cotton seed oil mills that do an immense and profitable business. He sold a short time ago 1,000 barrels of cotton seed oil through the Thurbers of this city to Antwerp. I suppose it will come back to us as olive oil.

"Besides being the largest planter and manufacturer, he is the largest merchant in the South. He is the head of the house of Richardson & May, which I understand has handled more cotton in one year than any house in the world. In one year 161,000 bales of cotton passed through its hands. I do not think this business has ever been surpassed. In addition to this house, Mr. Richardson owns and runs a great many country stores. He makes the purchases for these stores in person in purchases for these stores in person in New York, and will spend a day going among the wholesale houses selecting notions, dry goods, etc., for his country Beyond all these things he takes a lively interest in general investment and in railroads especially. He is con-trolling owner of the road from Shreveport to Vicksburg and has several other interests present and prespective in railroads."

"What is his fortune estimated at?" "All the way from five to twenty millions. I suppose he is the richest man in the South beyond doubt—but whether he is worth more or less than $10,000,000 I cannot say."

That is a good deal of information to draw out in a running fire of questions. but my friend gave it with the air of one who was thoroughly familiar with his subject. I am able to show some light on his estimate of Mr. Richard son's wealth. In a trial in Mississippil recently in which his wealth became a question, I understand he swore he was worth about three millions. Those who know his affairs think this estimate—for it was sworn to as an estitimate—is considerably under the mark, and that five millions could not mark his earthly possessions. The

Mr. Richardson, I am told, began life as a bar-keeper in Mississippi, and promptly bought out the man by whom he was employed. He did not remain long in this business, quitting it for a line in which his remarkable talent would find wider range. He is now about 62 years of age, and is a hale hearty old gentleman, good for many years yet. He gives his personal attention. years yet. He gives his personal attention to his vast business, and is syste-matic to the last degree. One of his peculiar habits is that of rising every night at 2 clock, waking his secretary and dispatching all of his business by 7 o'clock, when breakfast is served. He then has the whole day for outside business, and retires early at night. He has little education, but is a vigor-ous thinker, a practical man and con-sequently a most interesting talker. He is a firm believer in the future of the South, and its possibilities as a planting, mining and manufacturing section—and as a member of the centennial and world's fair commissioners, sippf Valley. talks up his section and its resources. His vast fortune and complex interests will fall into capable hands at his death as his sons are fine business men and all in active commercial life. A few men such as he, do more for the South than a hundred politicians.

The Prince of Punches is the delicate, full-flavored "Hub Punch," composed of old fine liquors and luscious fruits. H. W. S. in attanta Constitution.

New York, March 15.—The other day I was sitting in the office of the banking house of Latham, Alexander & Co., when a remarkable looking man entered the door.

He was fairly a 250-pounder—with his flesh well packed on, however, rather than hanging about loose. His face was smooth and clean—frank and pleasant in expression, but full of power and determination. There was a certain brusque decision in his manner that bespoke the man of affairs who had won success with his own hands, and wore the consequence and importance with which the people among whom he lived had clothed him. He stopped a moment in the anteroom, spoke pleasantly to an acquaintance or two, and then passed into the private office, where he was soon engaged in consultation with Mr. Latham, the head of the firm.

The latter forbade the manevring of mounted men in large bodies, and required them to act mostly in detail. Hence our great battles fur-nish no such mounted charges as those nish no such mounted charges as those of Alexander at Arbela, Hasdrubal at Cannæ, and Ney at Waterloe. The cavalry do not share with our infantry the honors of Corinth, Chancellersville and Chickamanga. Nor do they count their losses at Malvern Hill, Sharpsburg, Murfreesboro, Fredericksburg and Franklin. It is, nevertheless true, that immense numbers of the youth and manhood of the South perished in the cavalry service. They fell, for the most part, on the outposts—far to the nish no such mounted charges as those most part, on the outposts-far to the front, or distant on the flank; often in single combat, and most usually in skirmishes and actions, of which the general public rarely heard. The Shreveport road, in which he is interested, is the one in which Messrs. John T. & L. P. Grant, of Atlanta, are heavy investors. I believe the Georgians control the bonds of the road, while Mr. Richardson controls the stock. Gen. Henry R. Jackson is the attorney of the road, and it is now being negotiated for by Jay Geuld and the Texas Pacific. It is a very valuable piece of property, and will become a part of the great line if it is sold to Gould and his crowd.

The Oyster as a "Thing of Beauty." A Baltimore paper has discovered why the girls of that city are so enchanting. Ohio girls, it says, eat pork and sauerkraut. Massachusetts girls eat codfish-balls, Virginia girls eat bacon and greens, the Gulf States girls eat gumbo, New Hampshire girls eat pie and doughnuts, and Kentucky girls eat blue grass beef, and yet all these are prettier than the girls of Europe. But the Baltimore girl eats oysters, terrapin, canvas-back duck, bay mackerel, and soft-shell crabs, all productive of beauty.
