The Tongue of the Maid of Athens.

Maid of Athens, we must part! You will be strong, your temper tart; And when I go and when I come, Your tongue will be a pendulum. Hear my prayer before I go, Remember 'tis my last request, And, if you can for an hour or so, Keep it still and let me rest.

By those banded locks all unconfined, Blown all about by every wind, By that curved nose of iron joint, Like an interrogation point, Check that tongue's eccentric law, Oh heed, I beg, this one behest, And, if you can for an hour or so, Keep it still and let me rest.

By those lips that never close; By those crossed eyes which daunt their foes; By my bold head, so prompt to tell What words can do for me; Your tongue is darting to and fro; You pour forth words like one possessed; Keep it still and let me rest.

Maid of Athens, I am gone! I'll be at peace when I'm alone, Yst, though I fly to Istanbul, Your strident tones shall fright my soul, Can I cease to hear thee? Not that tongue is heard from East to West; But, if you can for an hour or so, Oh, keep it still and let me rest!

OBSERVATIONS.

A sporting-man has named his horse Blood, because he is a great go.

"Yes," said the school girl who had risen from the lowest to the highest position in her class, "I shall have a heron for my symbol as it denotes having come from East to West."

"Are you a wall-flower?" he asked, and she replied: "No, I am a wall, str." Then they waited.

Phenomenon: When a member, in the course of a very long speech yesterday, called for a glass of water, the speaker exclaimed: "I have no voice to my neighbors: 'This is all contrary to the laws of mechanics—a windmill running by water!'"

If you should meet a man that small name excites on the top of his head, you probably are angry; but most every man has a partridge there for all that.

It is now the fashion to put growing plants in the windows of beer saloons. No doubt this is done to lend significance to the old-time name of pot-house.

This has been a good winter for lecturers and amateur actors. With their severity even a dozen none but the wealthy can afford to throw even rotten ones.

A STRANGE STORY.

General Grant Relates an Incident of His Army Life in Mexico.

Louisville (Ky.) Transcript. A gentleman from this county recently met General Grant, when a conversation naturally ensued about Kentucky politics. Grant asked the Kentuckian how the race for Senator was going in the Ashland district and added that he was for General Cerro Gordo Williams because they had been old chums in the Mexican war. Grant then told this story as illustrative of the intimacy between him and General Williams: "He said that when he and Williams were in Mexico they were on one occasion, after the surrender of the city, on a frolic and that Williams had a fire, thoroughbred Kentucky mare and he (Grant) an Indian pony, which they were running at full speed down the streets of the city. Williams naturally outran him and that in running down the street he met a Mexican who had a pole across his shoulder with a jug hung on each end of it, in the common style of carrying water in that country; that Williams ran against the jug and knocked the man down with great violence. Grant said he looked back and noticed that a crowd gathered around the fallen man and rode back to see what was the matter, when he found that the man was dead. Grant adds that he never told Williams anything about it, because he knew that it would make him feel uncomfortable, and he believed he did not intend to kill him, but we cannot but admit that General Williams took the chances on doing so that he might have a little innocent fun. This story was told us by a devoted admirer of General Grant as an instance of Grant's indisposition to make a man feel uncomfortable unnecessarily."

The Man Mahone.

Wash. Cor. Augusta Chronicle. He called upon Mr. Stephens last Saturday. Our Representative was "disappointed in him in every way."

This is saying a good deal. I think the statement that Mahone is worth $2,000,000 a gross mistake. He will not likely correct any report that assimilates him to Rothschild or Vanderbilt. Some persons who know him well informed me that he was not really to be rated higher than $100,000. He owns a fine house at Petersburg, has four Alderney cows in his back yard and a flock of pheasants. He cultivates these birds for their eggs. Hen eggs are not to his taste, which is eccentric and dainty. When a railroad President at a big salary, he used to travel around on a hand car with a demijohn half as big as himself. That vessel was supposed to contain "true Democratic principles," but did not. Possibly, it would have been better for a good many persons if it had had the insipid virtues of Baker, Gibson or the Eagle brand. It was mineral water, of which he partook copiously for a severe kidney complaint. This he was, and attenuated his whole body, made piecemeal of his legs and probably affected his political comprehension. His father was a small man in stature, but his mother was a woman of great size and amazing force of character. When Mahone was a boy his father used to carry him around as a phenomenon in back-gammon. His gammon, to descend to punning, has not gone back on him. He is like Grant in tenacity or friendship, and unlike him, merciful less to enemies. He is said never to forgive a foe. This kind of man, at some period of his existence, always has a painful reminder that God exists and is not mocked.

How Edison Talks Now.

New York Herald, March 21. Mr. Thomas A. Edison, of the Edison Electric Light Company, yesterday said, strange as it may seem, that he will not underbid the gas companies. If competition necessitates a reduction of his prices, however, he will be able to reduce them, he said. He will simply offer consumers a better light than they have—safer, more brilliant, without noxious gases to make the house abominable, and in every way superior to the illuminating agents that are in use. He does not plume himself on the invention of the electric light; he has done no more than utilize the discovery that Faraday made in 1832. Nor does he expect electricity to supersede gas and oil, since these illuminations must necessarily hold their own in the household, especially in small towns.

Try Smith's Scrofula Syrup for your blood. It removes all skin eruptions, blotches, pimples, and clear complexion.

WALTON, BALMORON, CR., Oct. 10, 1879. Gentlemen:—While attending to my business this summer, I tried your Scrofula Syrup on my face. It being affected with an old sore, caused by thoroughly cleansing it, I am compelled to say that it is a wonderful medicine. I have used it in different physicians and remedies, but none of them cured me as this one has. I have used it in my family, and it has cured a remarkable case. Write me success, I am yours, respectfully. JOHN SMITH, For sale by Dr. T. C. Smith, 1009-5m.

PERSPECTS OF A ROW.

In the Republican Camp—More Grievances Than Appear—A Battle Between Political Giants Proposed.

Special to New York Herald.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The political skies are gloomy here to-day. The party harmony on which all the brethren were congratulating themselves as late as Monday has received a jar, greatly to the dismay of a considerable number of anxious souls, who hoped that with the expiration of the Hayes administration long standing sores would be healed and everybody would be happy. Some Western politicians visited the White House to-day with the design to explain to the President that disagreements within the party lines are extremely disagreeable and eminently to be avoided. They report to their friends this evening that they had their trouble for their pains, and that they found in the President a disposition to rule his political household without senatorial or any other interference or dictation.

This evening the feels in Republican circles the shadow of an impending conflict, the end whereof some Republicans privately confess they do not see. There are more and deeper grievances than as yet appear before the public, and the strife which for the present appears to lie between the President and some Senators, will be found to take wider scope. How it will end no one pretends to guess, but there are many who think that ought to have been prevented; that it is not even now to be stopped if any one only knew how to stop it, and that if it is not stopped Heaven only knows how far it will go and with what consequences to the party.

Impartial observers remark that if the present preliminaries result in a pitched battle it will be a battle royal and between men on both sides who know how to handle the weapons of political warfare. "This is not a fight between an inexperienced politician, like Hayes, and the whole Senate," said a cheerful Democrat to-day. "This is a fight between people on both sides who know how to fight, with a divided Senate, some of whose able members will arrange themselves on the administration side, and an administration whose chiefs are themselves skillful and astute politicians and not simple countrymen, like Hayes." That there is a contest impending is the general belief among Republicans, as also that it may produce almost at once some queer results.

WHAT HE SAW IN THE GLASS.

How a National Congressman Was Reclaimed by His Friends.

It only takes a small thing at times, says the Washington Capital, to turn the current and whole destiny of a man's life. "See that gentleman yonder," observed a friend the other day, "he's a new member of Congress, and a man of very great ability. I want to tell you about him. Fifteen years ago we were living in the same county, and practicing law before the same courts. He had all the business he could manage, but he took to drinking, and gradually went down. We all felt a deep sympathy with him because he was too good to throw away, and we decided to try the old plan on him. So four of us got together, and moved off toward the nearest bar room, where we knew we should find him. 'Come on in, Tom, we have something for you,' we said. 'Don't care if I do. Give me a little of the same.' While we were talking, one of our party managed to drop a small fishing worm into his glass, and he drank but Tom. He took up his glass, looked at it carefully, then put it down. We rallied him on his cowardice, and he then made another desperate effort but he couldn't lose sight of that worm. 'What's the matter, Tom? Why don't you drink?' After a vacant stare he said: 'Well I ain't thirsty, and walked toward the door. I have been told, and I believe it, that this was his last. He broke off from that day and his natural talents shot up again like a cork. Here he is now.'

Some Allocated Miracles.

ERIE, Pa., March 24.—The Rev. Mr. Maloney, who is alleged to have raised Miss Quillion from the dead about two months ago, has taken up his residence in Erie and is reported to be working marvelous miracles among the sick and maimed. His house is besieged by the poor of every class, blind, deaf, mute, paralytic and infirm people, all clamoring to be healed. A reporter visited the home to-day and saw the throng of patients. Father Maloney was interviewed and humbly disclaimed any miracle-working powers. "I am 'glory to God, who,' he says, 'answers my prayers.' James May, Ellen Deherly and several others declare that they were instantaneously healed of disease. To-day two ripples from Quebec arrived for the purpose of being healed. Maloney was formerly a priest of this diocese, but has traveled all over the world. His Bishop looks coldly upon his present acts.

Hiddenite.

The Scientific American notices at some length, the discovery in Alexander County, North Carolina, of a new mineral, to which has been given the above name, in honor of Prof. Hidden, who visited this State last year in search of platinum. For Mr. Edison's electric light. The new mineral is of a green color, nearly transparent, and nearly as valuable as the diamond. It is claimed as an American mineral, unknown to the world until Prof. Hidden's discovery.

A GOOD HOUSEWIFE.

The good housewife when giving her house a thorough cleaning, should bear in mind that the best means of her house are more produced. It is with simply perfect consumers a better light than they have—safer, more brilliant, without noxious gases to make the house abominable, and in every way superior to the illuminating agents that are in use. He does not plume himself on the invention of the electric light; he has done no more than utilize the discovery that Faraday made in 1832. Nor does he expect electricity to supersede gas and oil, since these illuminations must necessarily hold their own in the household, especially in small towns.
