THE REPUBLICAN SPLIT.

What the Correspondents Say of the Situation at Washington. The Philadelphia Times correspondent writes: There is a general conviction among the Wiser heads that this is not simply a fight about a couple of Federal offices, but the preliminary skirmish of the great battle which is to come off three years hence. The com-manding position of the New York custom house is but an outpost to be won. A desperate fight will therefore be made by Mr. Conkling to retain it, for no man knows better its importance. The prospect of such a coalition as will enable him to defeat Robertson is not the best he could desire, but he will work it for all it is worth. He has enthusiastic friends here who believe Conkling will win and that the end will be the humiliation of the Executive and his Premier. In fighting Robertson's confirmation by preventing an executive session, he does not labor an executive session, he does not labor under the disadvantage supposed, that of keeping out his own friends. Woodford and McDougall are already in office, acting under appointment and enjoying their salaries. It is predicted that Conkling will soon make a big speech, laying his grievance before the Senate and the country, but this is not his usual method of doing business of this sort and is not to be credited. this sort and is not to be credited.

The New York Herald's man says: Attorney-General MacVeagh's retirement from the cabinet is again the subject of speculation. It is claimed that he has exerted himself to defeat the confirmation of Messrs. Chandler and Robertson and the President's friends represent that he is disposed to take Mr. MacVeagh's reported interference very seriously. It is also stated that the nominations which are said to have given offence to Senators Conkling and Platt were made with the knowledge of those gentlemen and not without contact the serious characteristic flesh-pot it is more than whispered Shaffer yearns. The calculation of Mr. Hawkins is said to be that, while Messrs. Young and Shaffer are squabling over the place, he will step in and get it; while they shake the tree he hopes to gather the fruit. This is the those gentlemen and not without con-sulting them, as has been maintained. It is not likely that the name of either Mr. Chandler or Judge Robertson will be withdrawn, the opposition to these appointments having, apparently, confirmed the President in his original intention not to be overruled after his selections of officers have been made and their names sent to the Senate for confirmation unless something is brought forward to convince him of on fact-in other words, that it was no his appointees' unfitness of which he joke at all. did not know when the nominations

The Baltimore Sun correspondent gives this story: It is said on the very best authority that as matters now stand, Senator Conkling has declared that a split between the President and the Grant element of the Republican party is imminent and that it now rests solely with the President to decide whether this shall occur or not. Mr. Conkling is understood to hold that Gen. Garfield has by his recent acts placed himself in the same attitude towards the friends of Gen. Grant as that Gen. Garfield has by his recent acts placed himself in the same attitude towards the friends of Gen. Grant as that occupied by Mr. Hayes. In regard to the nomination of Mr. Robertson for the nomination of Mr. Robertson for is wretched, and he looks very feeble collector of the port of New York, it is now definitely understood that it was due to the advice of Mr. Blaine, and it is certain that a more obnoxious nomination to the friends of Grant could not possibly have been made. Mr. Robertson was one of the bolting members of the New York delegation at Chicago, and his course there was such as to make an irreconcilable breach between Mr. Conkling and himself. It is announced to-night that the President admits the inexpediency of the nomination of Robertson and some others, but is not now, at least, in any mood ooking to the withdrawal of it. He is inclined, however, in the future to consult the heads of the departments interested before making nominations, which he has not done in the past.

An associated press report says: Attorney-General MacVeagh's retirement from the cabinet is again the subject of speculation. It is claimed that he nad exerted himself to defeat the nomination of Messrs. Chandler and Robertson, and the President's friends represent that he is disposed to take MacVeagh's reported interference very seriously. It is also stated that the nominations which have given offense to Senators Conkling and Platt were nations which have given offense to Senators Conkling and Platt were made with the knowledge of those gentlemen, and not without consulting them, as has been maintained. It is not likely that the name of either Mr. Chandler or Judge Robertson will be withdrawn, the opposition to these appointments having apparently confirmed the President in his original intention not to be overruled after his selection of officers have been made and their names sent to the Senate for confirmation, unless something is brought know when the nominations were no doubt unfounded.

The Richmond Dispatch's man has this to say: The reports to-night is that Mr. Conkling will not only attack the Administration in open secwill remember Mr. Blaine even up to 1884. While it was evident that the New York Senator could never be an ardent friend of the Administration, it was not expected that he would so soon declare open war against it. Washington Correspondent Phila. Times. BLAINE'S INNING. The President has semi-officially an nounced that he will send in very few more nominations until the dead-lock is broken. When that time comes a large number of important nominations for consular and diplomatic positions now in process of arrangement will be sent to the Senate. It is said there will be more changes abroad than is believed likely under the circumstances of a Republican succession at the White House. This is because a number of important positions like that occupied by Badeau are filled by just such men, who have been actively or inferentially antagonistic to Mr. Blaine. These must give way to the friends of the present administration, which means, as to these foreign appointments, friends and supporters of Mr. Blaine. Some of them will be removed entirely and others promoted at lower salary, like Badeau and Lew Wallace. When these nominations are sent in it is predicted that there will be a general kicking all round. These speculations probably have their foundation in the recent Blaine moves looking to the subordination of the stalwart wing of the Republican party at home and abroad, to that represented in the person of the Raleigh News and Observer The number of Republican pilgrims The number of Republican pilgrims to whom Washington has been a Mecca since the 4th of March is not to be told, for space forbids. Every day or so they pass and repass between this city and that, while in every nook and corner of the State there is a similar grand forward movement. Col. A. W. Shaffer, who has an exceedingly bright eye for the main chance, and is always around when offices are to be apportioned among the faithful, returned to the city vesterday, having just completthe city yesterday, having just completed his pilgrimage. To judge from his smiling countenance, one might have thought that he had been rewarded for his trip by a cabinet position at least.

The Colonel says it looks mighty near

He wants to be marshal of Montana, New Mexi-co, Idaho, Colorado, Nevada, or any of those delightful far Western States or Territories. His usual hopefulness abides with him, and he is sure of a "big thing." Then, Phil. They think it saves breath and exertion to wait until the other fellows have worried themselves out. T. B. An Ex-Newspaper Man in Luck. Baleigh News and Observer.

On the 9th of March The News and Observer announced that one-half of ticket No. 16,416 in the Louisiana State Lottery, which drew the capitol prize of $30,000 in the drawing of March 8th, was held in Raleigh. Ever since that time the inquiries as to who was the lucky man have been constant, and no efforts have been spared to find him. efforts have been spared to find him. Yesterday the right person's name was revealed. Information came to us from a perfectly reliable source that Mr. Peter M. Wilson, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, was the fortunate person. Soon after we received this definate information a reporter called on Mr. Wilson at his office, in the Briggs building, to make inquiries as to the matter. Mr. Wilson declined to make any statement whatever as to whether he did or did not

He will declare also that under know when the nominations were made. Appropos of his willingness to reconsider an appointment for other than political reasons, it is mentioned that certain citizens of Buffalo have made so strong a case against Mr. Tyler on the ground of his unfitness for the position of collector that his name will probably be withdrawn.
