THE DEBT OF TENNESSEE. The Terms Upon Which It is to Be The Wheeling, Parkersville & Char-Settled. The funding bill just passed by the Tennessee Legislature, and entitled "An act to compromise and settle the bonded indebtedness of the State of Tennessee," provides in effect that the outstanding bonds, principal and interest, shall be refunded at their face value up to the 1st of July, 1881, in new bonds payable in 1980, but redeemable at the pleasure of the State at any time before maturity, and bearing interest at 3 per cent. per annum. The amount of indebtedness thus provided for includes outstanding bender which have cludes outstanding bonds which have been refunded or renewed under pre- the Chesapeake & Ohio road, and at vious acts, amounting to $20,221,350, bonds of old issues which have not been renewed to the amount of $789,-000, and arrears of interest aggregating about $6,000,000. Originally, before the war, it was contracted as an "internal improvement debt," in aid of railroads, turnpikes and canals, and in 1860 amounted to $6,481,000. During the "reconstruction period" succeeding the war it was largely increased in consequence of the inability of the railroads to meet their obligations to the State. In 1869-70 an act of the Legislature was passed which authorized the railroads to discharge their indebtedness to the State in the State's own "legally issued bonds," then largely depreciated in value. In 1872 the State's lien upon the defaulting railroads was exhausted, some eleven of them being sold, the State realizing from the sale $6,698,000, paid almost exclusively in depreciated bonds and coupons. This still left the State owing a large amount of bonds issued on account of these very roads, while the only assets which the State had to show on account of that indebtedness had been sacrificed by the sale. In 1877 the State formally repudiated by the passage of an act suspending payment of interest on the State debt.
The question of paying the State debt became, as in Virginia, the football of politics, and after various abortive schemes of settlement which were mooted and fell through, and after a series of stormy debates, carried on in successive Legislatures and on the stump, the bill for the present settlement has prevailed by the concurrent votes of the "State-credit" Democrats and the debt-paying Republicans over the "low-tax" Democrats and Repudiators-having been passed in the State nate by a majority of one, a " Senator voting with the State-credit members of his party for the purpose, and has been signed by the present Republican Governor and become a law. The new bonds to be issued in pursuance of the act, in accordance with its provisions, will bear upon their face the words "for the prompt payment of the principal and interest the faith, honor and credit of the State is solemnly pledged." It is further provided that the coupons of the bonds as they become due shall be receivable for all debts and taxes due the State. Believ-
